Could there be an outside chance that you could have Xerox copies made of any such manuscript items that I have sent to you for use in your document? I don't refer to anything specific - but just random items found here or there or wherever that you may have around. Frequently I say or write things that later I remember only vaguely - things that I might attach some importance to at some future tho' not specific time.

I'd like to accumulate a kind of back-log of such material for any possible use or purpose in the future.

I'm enclosing a check for $75.00 to defray any expenses that Xeroxing may involve - also to meet any costs of errand payments to possible needs of students around your campus who may be interested in helping out in such a matter.

I might eventually include such Xerox copies in my "folio" to go into the Smithsonian collection - or into any future historical or biographical documentations that might develop with regard to my efforts and works over the years.

Just in passing, you would doubtless be interested to know that one of my paintings is now in the final stages (processes) of being acquired by the Metropolitan Museum of Art to be included in its collection of 20th Century American Art. This has nothing to do whatsoever with your thesis study. It is only to do with letting you in on a bit of personal news which, to me, is very gratifying! Please do not spread this around as yet! The check to me has not arrived - but it will.

P.S. With regard to having Xerox copies made here in N.Y. - it is quite a chore, believe me - time, delays, waiting. I'm not always up to it physically. JW.

More later -
Sincerely,
Hal Woodruff

I am enclosing check for $100⁰⁰ instead of $75⁰⁰ - to defray such expenses
- whatever that you may have in Xeroxing copies of material you feel that I could use in purposes as I have described above. Hu.
