Howe died late Saturday night in Naval Hospital after more than a year's illness from a bronchial ailment complicated by heart disease. He and the President had been close associates since 1910 when Howe gave up his newspaper career to throw in his fortunes with Roosevelt, then a young State Senator in New York.

CANCELS D. A. R. SPEECH

The President canceled a speech scheduled for last night before the convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and also gave up his press conference set for today. After the burial in Fall River he will go to his home in Hyde Park and remain in seclusion until next Saturday when he speaks at a dinner of the National Democratic Club at the Hotel Commodore in New York.

Mrs. Roosevelt paid tribute to Colonel Howe's kindliness and wisdom yesterday at her weekly press conference. She said:

"He was an old and close friend of many years standing and always had a room of his own in whatever house we have ever lived. He had few friends and didn't care for many people, but he spent a great deal of time with the few persons he did like.

"His peculiar gift was his extraordinary wisdom and an analytical intelligence that was remarkable. He was extraordinarily sympathetic to any real need or helplessness and was always kindly and gentle."
