Twentieth Annual Art Exhibition

John W. Arterbery with Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Hooper of Tallahassee view Mr. Arterbery's prize-winning "Martyr" at the opening of the Art Exhibition.

The Twentieth Annual Atlanta University Exhibition of Paintings, Sculpture and Prints by Negro artists, shown from April 9 through May 7, brought together outstanding works of professional and student artists from eighteen states, ranging from Texas and Oklahoma on the west to Massachusetts and New York in the northeast and Michigan in the north.

The Jury of Awards, Joel Reeves and Joseph Amisano, selected sixty-eight works for exhibition from approximately 350 entries. Fifty artists were represented in the exhibition. Of exceptional strength were the oils and the graphic arts.

John M. Arterbery, associate professor of art at Florida A. and M. University and a previous winner of one award and two honorable mentions, received the top prize in oils for his figure "Martyr." Also of Florida A. and M., Howard E. Lewis, chairman of the art department, received the first award for any subject for his collage, "Pitiless Sun." This is Mr. Lewis's third Atlanta University award, the others being the graphic arts.

The contribution of Florida A.

and M. to the art exhibition is always considerable and this year was no exception, for five other entries from there were selected for exhibition, another by Mr. Arterbery, one by Gerald F. Hooper, two by Herman D. Bailey, and one by Joe Walker, Jr.

Ed Strickland of New York received the John Hope Award for the best landscape in oil, his first Atlanta University prize, for "Brooklyn View." Mr. Strickland has exhibited in New York and New Jersey, his most recent award being in the 1960 Mid-Season Oil Exhibition of the Village Art Center.

President Rufus E. Clement chats with guests at the Art Exhibition.

"Brooklyn View" by Ed Strickland, New York, winner of the John Hope Award for the best landscape.

Romeyn Van Vleck Lippman, Boston artist and winner of three previous awards, two in water color and one for the best figure in oil, took the second prize for any subject in oil for "Church". This award was made on the ballot of those attending the exhibition. "E.J.'s" by Alpha Bell of Montgomery, Alabama, was second in the balloting and "Carmen" by Lady Bird Cleveland of New York third.

Alvin Smith, art instructor in Dayton, Ohio, a first-time winner, received the first award in water colors for "As in an Arctic Sunrise." He also had two prints accepted for exhibition. Mr. Smith is a recent M. A. graduate of the University of Illinois and has exhibited previously in the midwest where he has won numerous prizes.

Calvin Burnett, Cambridge, Massachusetts, won his fourth and fifth Atlanta University prizes, second in water colors for "Four Girls Dancing Together," and first in graphics for "Girl in Black." Mr. Burnett also had an oil in the show. The second prize in graphic arts went to David C. Driskell, a member of the art department at Talladega College, Alabama, for "Still Life." Mr. Driskell has been represented in the University's permanent collection since 1959 when he won the John Hope Award for Landscape in oil. In this year's show he had an oil and a water color in addition to his print.

The jury awarded only one prize in sculpture which went to Juan Thomas of Atlanta for "Nude."

The following artists received Honorable Mention: James Kennedy, Mobile, Alabama, for "The Piano Player," and John Wilson, New York, for "Man Resting," both figures in oil; John Wilson for "Mirmande," landscape in oil; George Ferrell, Sr., Atlanta, for "Keepers," sculpture; Willa K. Clements, Talladega, Alabama, for "Melons," a print.

The prizes, totalling $1,400, are given by the University and Radio Station WAOK. All prize winners become part of the permanent collection and seven of them are now on exhibition in the Atlanta University Contemporary American Art Collection.

"Girl in Black" by Calvin Burnett, Cambridge, Massachusetts, winner of the First WAOK Award in Graphic Arts.

The June Convocation

The academic procession enters Sisters Chapel for the joint Atlanta University, Morehouse, Spelman Baccalaureate Service.

The seventy-nine graduates at the ninety-second commencement convocation were told by Charles C. Diggs, Jr. that too many young Negroes are unprepared to meet the challenge in new fields or to compete in old because they have been trained for jobs that are consistent with racial barriers. The Michigan member of the United States House of Representatives said that if Negroes failed to shift the economic emphasis from consumption to production and did not train themselves for the challenge of integration, an integrated society would be to their disadvantage.

"The convenience of race is fast slipping away," he said.

Congressman Diggs stressed the importance of the ballot in the Negro's fight for equality. Saying that more Negroes from both political parties are in public office in Michigan than in other states, he gave as the reason the fact that Negroes in Michigan vote. "We can sit-in, kneel-in, wade-in, but unless we stop and sit-down on our obligation to vote, we will stay second class citizens."

The graduates were urged to think twice before leaving the South, as the speaker cited the need for new, dedicated, sacrificing leaders to fill the place between the present leaders and the masses. As benefits to the Southern Negro he listed industrialization of the South, its relative prosperity, the growth of the labor movement, and the breaking down of segregation.

Speaking of the rising nationalism of non-white peoples, Mr. Diggs said that the ugly picture of segregation was more significant to the African than was white suppressing white in Hungary. As communism takes the lead in the arms race and technical know-how, all that America has to offer the uncommitted peoples is idealism. "We can't afford Anglo-Saxon hatesmanship," he said. "We can't let hoodlums crawl out from under rocks."

He called on Negroes to patronize Negro businesses and professional men and on Negro businessmen to pay decent wages, on professional people to keep pace with the developments in their fields.

Dr. Edwin T. Dahlberg, pastor of the Delmar Street Baptist Church in St. Louis, a former president of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the United States, preached the baccalaureate sermon at the joint services held by Atlanta University and Morehouse and Spelman Colleges on June 4.

Assessing the relative importance of truth and freedom, Dr. Dahlberg said that truth should always be put before freedom, since man can have freedom of speech, freedom of religion, all the freedoms and still be a gangster. Man has carried all the way from the Stone Age to the Space Age his primitive passions and blunders.

Truth, the truth which can set man free, he defined not as scientific or economic truth, not as the amassing of facts, but truth exemplified in the life of Christ, truth incarnate, nailed on the cross, ready to die for faith.

THE ANNUAL CONVOCATION

Dr. William Augustus Banner, professor of philosophy at Howard University, delivered the address at the annual Atlanta University Center Convocation on January 29. Dr. Banner, who has been a member of the Howard University faculty since 1945, is a native of Philadelphia with undergraduate training at Pennsylvania State University. He holds the B.D. from Yale and the M.A. and Ph.D. from Harvard University. In 1952-53 he was a fellow at Dumbarton Oaks, Harvard University. He has been visiting professor at Yale and visiting lecturer at Smith College.

In his address Dr. Banner brought the training and insights of a philosopher to an analysis of current problems. The sit-ins and a new birth of motivation show what is important in the existing order, he said. It is the sad fate of Western history that living well has been equated with something different, that productive activities have been first in the order of values. Arts should be placed first in the scale of values, not relegated to a position below political stability and a life of comfort, he said.

The position that the conduct of life without wisdom is a way to prepare for a life of wisdom is a contradiction, according to Dr. Banner. The most dangerous man in the world is the one who disavows philosophy, yet represents a philosophy of his own. The first slave ships, sweat shops, legislation for segregation all reflect a philosophy.

In each person there is an impulse to freedom and self-fulfillment which makes all men equal as persons, as objects of justice, in pursuit of happiness, he stated. These rights have been only partially allowed, sometimes openly denied.

Participating in the convocation were President Rufus E. Clement, who presided, President Frank Cunningham of Morris Brown College, who introduced the speaker, and President James P. Brawley of Clark College, President Harry V. Richardson of the Interdenominational Theological Center, and President Benjamin E. Mays of Morehouse College. Music was by the Morris Brown College Choir, the Clark College Female Sextette, and the Atlanta-Morehouse-Spelman Chorus, with Mrs. Lilla Joyce Johnson, Spelman College, as organist.

RELIGIOUS EMPHASIS WEEK

For the sixth Atlanta University Center observation of Religious Emphasis Week the Reverend James H. Robinson, pastor of the Church of the Master, New York, was selected as speaker for the Center services. The joint services opened with a sermon by Dr. Robinson on Sunday, February 26, and closed on Wednesday evening, March 1, with a Communion Service.

Following each of the first three services there were informal question periods for the students and the speaker. President Frank Cunningham of Morris Brown College was chairman of a planning committee composed of faculty and student representatives from each of the six institutions in the Center.

Dr. Robinson chose as his theme

Dr. James H. Robinson, Church of the Master, New York, Center speaker for Religious Emphasis Week.

Dr. James H. Robinson, second from left, with the presidents of the six institutions in the Atlanta University Center, at the Joint Religious Emphasis Week observance.

Alternatives for a Time of Promise and Anxiety. Speaking on Faith Alternative to Doubt, he said that skeptics and doubters have contributed very little to the progress of the world whereas men of faith venture beyond man's vision and search for the hidden meaning of life.

Even people in whom faith is strong are beset with doubts he acknowledged, and then weighed faith against science, reason, and belief. "Faith is not blind belief in the supernatural; it does not stand alone separated from other avenues of knowledge, but it goes beyond knowledge to which it is related. Where evidence is available, faith takes it into account, but faith goes beyond evidence."

with conformity, citing Jesus' break with the conformity of Near Eastern religion, which had no concern with man. He characterized the young as realistic, trying to get ahead by knowing the right people, taking no risk unless they know the outcome. He called for people with a dream in the heart.

The refusal to take a stand, to break away from the majority for fear of ridicule exacts a large price.

The dream must be a positive dream, not just a dream to be free from something. Yet man was meant to be free to dream.

The guest ministers who conducted services on the individual campuses participated in the administration of the Lord's Supper. They were the Reverend Daniel Webster Wynn, Chaplain, Tuskegee Institute, at Clark College; the Reverend Conrad Browne, Koinonia Farm, Waycross, Georgia, at Morehouse College; the Reverend Frederick C. James, Director of the Committee of Social Action, the African Methodist Episcopal Church, at Morris Brown College; and the Reverend William Bell Glinesk, Spencer Memorial Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, at Spelman College.

TOWN MEETINGS

The Town Meetings sponsored by the political science departments in the Center with Dr. Samuel DuBois Cook of the Atlanta University department as moderator continued to address themselves to pressing current problems.

The January meeting brought to the platform Eugene Patterson, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, Dr. Tilman C. Cothran, chairman of the Atlanta University department of sociology, and Clark College student Robert Glover in a discussion of the responsibility of Southern leadership in the 1960's.

Quoting Winston Churchill's "In defeat defiance, in victory magnanimity," Mr. Patterson said that Negro leadership has a heightening responsibility in victory and urged Negro preparation for magnanimity. Noting a gradual change in the attitudes of Southern white leadership, he asked the Negro not to let hatred grow, to maintain dignity and the appeal for a Christian solution. "There is strength in restraint and legality as weapons. To forsake them for attack, which begets counterattack, is to lose the greatest strength of the Negro movement."

Mr. Glover said that the South was robbed of leadership potential through segregation and that its worst leaders speak for it. "The leadership of the South must learn to speak in national terms."

Dr. Cothran also noted "the astounding silence of the majority of whites" and said that their failure to take a stand has encouraged extremist groups such as the Klan. He said that the South had the opportunity to give the country leadership of prestige if it would face up to the legal and moral facts of the '60's and take the initiative in destroying segregation, if it would acknowledge that democracy must include all racial groups and junk paternalistic attitudes and invite Negroes into the inner councils.

The February panel, composed of Lonnie King, Chairman of the Committee on the Appeal for Human Rights, Margaret Long, Atlanta

Journal columnist, and M. Carl Holman, member of the Clark College faculty and editor of the Atlanta Inquirer, assessed the successes, failures, and prospects of the student sit-in movement.

The movement has accomplished more than people think, more than have 100 years of legislation, in that it has reawakened older Negroes and stirred the consciences of people, Mr. Holman said, and there was general agreement from other members of the panel. Mr. King said that the students had disturbed the complacency of the "black bourgeoisie" and aroused the conscience of the Negro middle class. Miss Long said that not many white people have avenues to say what they mean, but that the movement was causing them to think and, by taking thought, to add cubits to their stature.

Although Lonnie King scored the coldness of some older Negro leaders toward the movement, Mr. Holman said that 100 percent support is not important. "It is debasing to think that Negroes act 100 percent and it is good to be questioned both within and without the race." Both he and Miss Long observed that young Negroes have discovered the power to shape events and also that they have been able to bring white students in increasing numbers into the movement.

Progress will be slow in some places, Mr. Holman said, but the important thing is to decide what is the highest good, "peace, Cadillacs, split-level houses, or freedom? To the students, freedom is the highest goal."

In March the topic was the adequacy of American education for the nuclear age. This was discussed by Dr. John Letson, superintendent of the Atlanta Public Schools, Dr.

Frank Cunningham, president of student in political science.

Morris Brown College, and Henry Wilkins III, Merrill Fellow at Atlanta University and a graduate

President Benjamin E. Mays of Morehouse College, Curtis Gaye, Morehouse senior, and Robert Tucker, Clark College student, considered the role of the church in social change at the following meeting. Mr. Gaye saw a general decline in the power of the church and said that its significance in initiating social change had been reduced to the minimum. Mr. Tucker agreed with this view, but Dr. Mays countered that the church is primarily a worshipping institution and that it has a good case even if it does not advocate social change. In further defense he said that it contributes an intangible quality to its members who, as individuals thus motivated, work for social change.

In the closing session Dr. Paul I. Clifford, professor of education and registrar at the University, Dr. Lionel Newsom of the Morehouse College sociology department, student leader Lonnie King, and the Reverend Otis Moss, vice-president of the Atlanta Chapter of the NAACP, discussed the perils and prospects of Negro leadership.

Dr. Clifford urged an examination of the way in which Negro leadership is chosen so that the various abilities resident not in one individual or group, but in many, can be utilized to extend Negro rights, noting also that Negro goals should be consonant with the goals of all Americans. Dr. Newsom said that the aid of white leadership was also needed.

Mr. King, although he acknowledged the contribution of the NAACP in the field of litigation, said that young people want accel-

Consultants for the conference were Dr. Helen Robinson and Dr. Leone Burfield of the University of Chicago, Dr. George Spache of the University of Florida, Dr. Ralph Staiger of Mississippi Southern College, and Dr. Paul Witty of Northwestern University.

Serving as group chairmen for the section meetings were Mrs. Eunice Newton, North Carolina College, Ralph Martin, Knoxville College, Maurice Lee, Morgan State College, and Mrs. T. T. Murray, Fort Valley State College.

ALPHA KAPPA DELTA INITIATION

Seventeen students from the Center were initiated into Alpha Kappa eration in social change and new leadership which can work more closely with the masses. Mr. Moss warned against the danger of Negro leadership becoming as paternalistic as the white, a dictatorial carbon copy, and called for protesting rather than compromising leadership.

READING CONFERENCE HELD

The Reading Center, a cooperative project of five of the institutions in the Atlanta University Center, directed by Dr. Lynette Saine of the Atlanta University faculty, with Dean N. P. Tillman of the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences as advisor, held a two-day conference on reading problems in March. The meeting, sponsored by the Lilly

CAMPUS BRIEFS

LECTURE ON CAMUS

Dr. Germaine Bree, associate editor of The French Review and permanent member of the Institute for Research in the Humanities at the University of Wisconsin, spoke to the French students of the Center on "Albert Camus" in January. She developed her sympathetic analysis of the French genius who died tragically in an automobile accident last year from Camus's own statement, "My deep source is in the poverty and light in which I live."

The poverty was the memory of his destitute childhood, the light the world of light of the Mediterranean which he expressed symbolically in his works in the sun, the desert, the basic image of water rising in the midst of desert.

Camus's claim for happiness took the form of a claim for justice, a commitment to human beings which drew him deeply into his times and set him apart from Sartre, for example, with his sense of class guilt. Nor did he share the overwhelming seriousness of existentialism. "He communicated not through an ideology, but through artistic expression."

SCHLESINGER FORUM SPEAKER

Arthur M. Schlesinger, Jr. spoke on the campus in January under the joint sponsorship of the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences and the School of Business Administration. Speaking on American domestic policies, the Harvard historian, now an adviser to President John F. Kennedy, said that elimination of racial inequalities must be given first place among the problems facing the new president.

Negro leadership has seen the need for awakening the moral sense of the community, he said, as he praised the NAACP for its use of the courts and Martin Luther King, Jr. for the non-violent movement. He wished that white leadership had been able to amass restraint, wisdom, and patience. The extremes of racism, whether white or Negro, he found equally reprehensible.

The proper allocation of the wealth of the United States is another deep concern of the incoming administration. The Pulitzer-prize winning professor blamed the laissez-faire creed of the 1950's for the failure of the United States, the richest nation in the world, to allocate its wealth for taking care of the mounting social needs in education, medical care, decent housing, and conservation of resources, instead of for private indulgence. He pointed out that the USSR is spending twice as large a percentage of its gross national product for education and defense as the United States. But "many people are now coming to realize that selfishness is not necessarily the road to salvation."

The crisis confronting America of today is abstract as compared to the "visible crisis" confronting Franklin Roosevelt, he said, noting that Kennedy had based his campaign in the belief that the American people were intelligent enough to grasp the nature of the crisis.

Mr. Schlesinger based his conclusions on the theory of a cyclical rhythm in national affairs, a rhythm in which there were successive appearances of militant and idealistic leadership followed by periods of materialism and exhaustion. He thought that the Kennedy administration was coming into power at the beginning of a period of positive idealism, though the closeness of the vote indicated that the shift has not yet fully taken place. "We are, however, on the upturn of the cycle toward public action. This transition is larger than from one man to another or from one party to another. This inauguration may mark the transition from one political epoch to another."

NEW SCHOLARSHIP FOR LIBRARIANS

LIBRARY HOLDINGS GROW

Looking toward the acquisition of enough new books to reach a goal of 200,000 by the Centennial Year, as compared to the present 163,000 volumes, the Trevor Arnett Library is expanding its holdings from several sources.

In April a gift of eighty volumes was received from Attorney William Huff of Chicago, as well as a complete set of the Georgia Code Annotated, given by Attorney L. For each of the four years of this project $4,000 will be allocated for library materials, the fields in the subsequent years being India, Russia, and Africa.

Again looking toward the Centennial Celebration, the Librarian is collecting letters, records, and other memorabilia of the University and students who attended it during its early years to be used in the Atlanta University Archives Room. This collection was enriched earlier in the year when Mr. George K. Howe, who was a member of the University faculty 1902-1929, gave to it eighty-five letters consisting of his correspondence with former presidents and administrative officers. William W. Bennett, Librarian, requests further donations of this type.
