Renovation Floor Plans Approved by Library Board of Trustees; Final Designs on Drawing Board

On October 6, 2008, the Board of Trustees of the Robert W. Woodruff Library (RWWL) of the Atlanta University Center (AUC) approved preliminary renovation floor plans developed by the architectural firm of Shepley, Bulfinch, Richardson & Abbott.

The Board's approval is a major step toward transforming the Woodruff Library into a 21st century learning and living environment that meets the needs of the AUC community.

"This renovation, like all Library service and program improvements, is designed to support the teaching and learning excellence

Director Loretta Parham.

"At every step in this process, we have sought and will continue to seek student and faculty input to ensure that the 'New Woodruff' reflects the intellectual and social vibrancy of the AUC."

Library student and faculty advisory groups have reviewed and provided feedback on the initial floor plans. And still more student and faculty input is needed. Library staff would love an opportunity to present and gather feedback on the schematic plans to other campus groups.

Expanded 24-Hour Library Access Popular with AUC Students

Which night was most popular for studying at the Library during fall 2008 mid-term exam period? The first day of exams (Monday, October 13), when nearly 2,100 AUC visitors entered and exited the Woodruff Library.

The most popular time for studying? According to Library staff, attendance was at its highest at 2 AM each morning. All statistics from the mid-term exam period point to increased use of the Library during 24-hour operations.

This fall, when Woodruff offered three additional days of 24-hour library access, more users than ever (8,731) chose RWWL as their preferred study space.

This represents a 50 percent

RWWL Sponsors Election Event Viewings for AUC Community

On November 4, 2008, "Election Watch Night @ the Library" capped off a month of activities dedicated to promoting civic engagement.

During the event, Library users kept abreast of election results throughout the night via a satellite feed televised on a giant projection screen in RWWL's Virginia Lacy Jones Exhibition Hall.

There was Library wide excitement at the history-making moment when Illinois Sen. Barack Obama was named the first African American president elect of the United States!

In addition to planning, promoting and providing snacks for the event, the Library's Information & Research Services staff members assembled an extensive display of election and voting-related resource material.

RWWL also sponsored election and voting-related events, including:

- ◆ Archives & Special Collections exhibit, "Exercise Your

Right to Vote," chronicling African Americans' struggles to obtain and exercise their voting rights

- ◆ Public viewing of the October 15 presidential debate, co-sponsored with the Clark Atlanta University Department of African American Studies and the Office of Graduate Studies

New Policies Promote Building Safety, Access to Library Resources

To preserve the safety and security of our users during the upcoming Library renovation, the following policies governing building/property access and use have been revised:

Computer Use

Effective January 5, 2009, AUC users will need to use their remote access accounts to log on to public computers within the Library. This change is being made to ensure computing resources are available to you, the students, faculty and staff of the AUC—our primary users.

If you have not yet established a remote access account, you may do so only on from your campus dormitory room, campus office or in the Library at:

<https://ezproxy.auctr.edu/ezproxy/main/rwwl.asp>.

For assistance with establishing your remote access account, contact askref@auctr.edu or call 404-978-2067.

Library Access

In September, RWWL established a new Library Access Policy with revised building entry requirements. The new policy allows entrance to all visitors with valid AUC or government-issued identification (driver's license, passport, military ID, etc.). After 7 PM, only AUC member users with valid identification are admitted to the library building.

Parking Lot Access

The revised parking lot policy instituted in September still allows for student and faculty parking in the RWWL lot in the evenings and on weekends. But to preserve our patrons' safety during construction, we are now limiting weekday access to the parking lot, which is expected to be a key staging area for construction equipment and contractors.

Contact: askref@auctr.edu or 404-978-2067 for more details on any of the revised policies.

NEW FOR YOU!: ScienceDirect Database and YouTube Tutorials

Science Direct Database —

Beginning January 2009, AUC faculty and students, through the Woodruff Library, will have access to 35 journals via the ScienceDirect platform! This online tool offers users a personalized and efficient research experience via:

- ◆ Favorite Journals and Books List
- ◆ Quick Links
- ◆ Recent Actions
- ◆ E-mail and Display Preferences
- ◆ RSS
- ◆ E-mail Article
- ◆ Personalized search, volume/issue, citation and topic alerts

YouTube Tutorials — RWWL

users can access a world of research tutorials quickly and simply

(no special software needed) through the popular online video sharing site, YouTube.

From the YouTube Tutorials link on the Library's home page, faculty and students can view eight (8) video tutorials specially selected by Woodruff librarians to meet the research and information needs of AUC users. RWWL staff are in the process of creating more video tutorials for the most commonly used resources to add to the collection.

Users can watch a demonstration of each step in the research process, while using the “pause,” “rewind” and “play” buttons to control the pace at which information is provided. In addition, these visually rich research guides provide “just-in-time” reference assistance to remote users. This will be particularly helpful during the upcoming library renovation, when more users may choose to access resources remotely.

For more information on the new ScienceDirect database or YouTube Video Tutorials, email: AskRef@aucr.edu or call 404-978-2067.
