The Maroon Tiger

A Pictorial Journal of College Life

MOREHOUSE COLLEGE

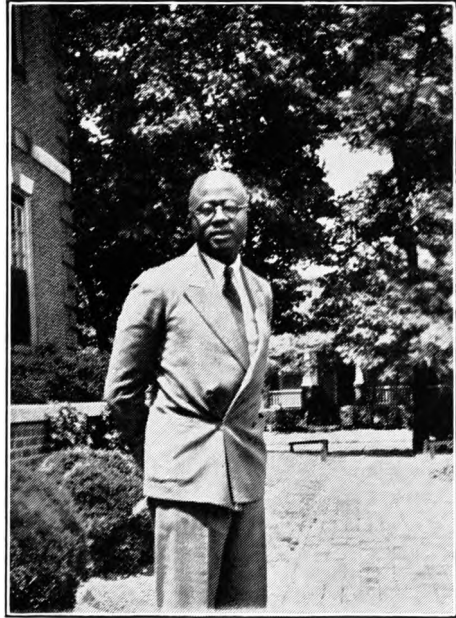

Atlanta, Georgia

Foreword

The appearance of this book marks the closing of another scholastic year. In the hope that this 1938 Maroon Tiger may serve to perpetuate the memories of joyous hours and enduring friendships of college days, the staff has endeavored to compile in these pages a pictorial record of life "on the red hill." Should the pages of this book arouse happy memories when reviewed in years to come and recall the associations, pleasant scenes, and proud achievements of the students and Morehouse College, our purpose will be fulfilled—our task a success.

—THE STAFF.

A simple tribute to one who has contributed much to Morehouse College in time, effort and spirit, one who has been admired by all who have come in contact with him.

As a token of appreciation for his devoted service and loyalty to the students and the school, we dedicate this Tiger to Mr. Nathaniel P. Tillman, Head of the Department of English, Morehouse College.

MOREHOUSE COLLEGE

Atlanta, Georgia

Office of the President

May 15, 1938.

My Dear Friends:

At the request of the students, I am sending a message to the students of Morehouse College. I shall express myself in quotations from various authors because from some of these have come patience and strength to endure.

I have no fear! What is in store for me
Shall find me self-reliant, undismayed.
God grant my only cowardice may be Afraid—to be afraid. . . .

—E. J. Appleton.

The world is full of the possible.
But you have got to fight to win it.

—William F. Lampton.

Hard things are put in our way, not to stop us, but to call out our courage and strength.

—Anon.

If you are beaten to earth, well, well what's that?
Come up with a smiling face.

It's nothing against you to fall down flat,
But to lie there, that's disgrace.

—Anon.

No, when the fight begins within himself,
A man's worth something. God stoops o'er his head.

—Robert Browning.

I am bigger than anything that can happen to me. All these things, sorrow, misfortune and suffering, are outside my door. I am in the house and I have the key.

—Charles F. Lummis.

Aspire, break bounds. I say,
Endeavor to be good, and better still,
And best. Success is naught, endeavor's all.

—Robert Browning.

If we should fail—
We fail.

But screw your courage to the sticking-place
And we'll not fail.

—Shakespeare.

All the doors that lead inwardly to the secret place of the Most High are doors outward—out of self—out of smallness—out of wrong.

—George MacDonald.

Your friend and brother.

S. H. ARCHER, President.

“Skipper”

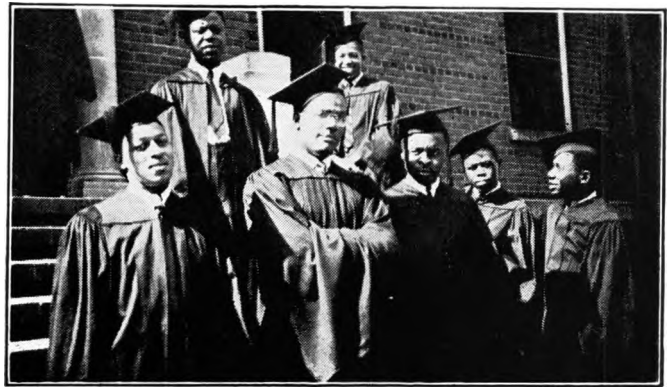

Upright, patient and tireless in his service to the college is Mr. Frederick Carrigan Gassett who having been Bursar of the school for the past number of years has proven his ability to build up high college standards, win the admiration of the students, the faculty, and the parents.

He certainly is no stranger to us since he has been skipper of the good ship Morehouse for these few years. Mr. Gassett has given unreservedly the best thoughts and supreme labor to Morehouse College by his quiet streak of genial humor, his fatherly counsel, his constant devotion to his work and by all those qualities which tend to make him a cultured gentleman.

During his years as Bursar the boys have all learned to love him, not merely as Bursar but as a man with optimistic vision, a clean sportsman, a man of courage and one in whom all the fellows have unlimited confidence.

SENIORS

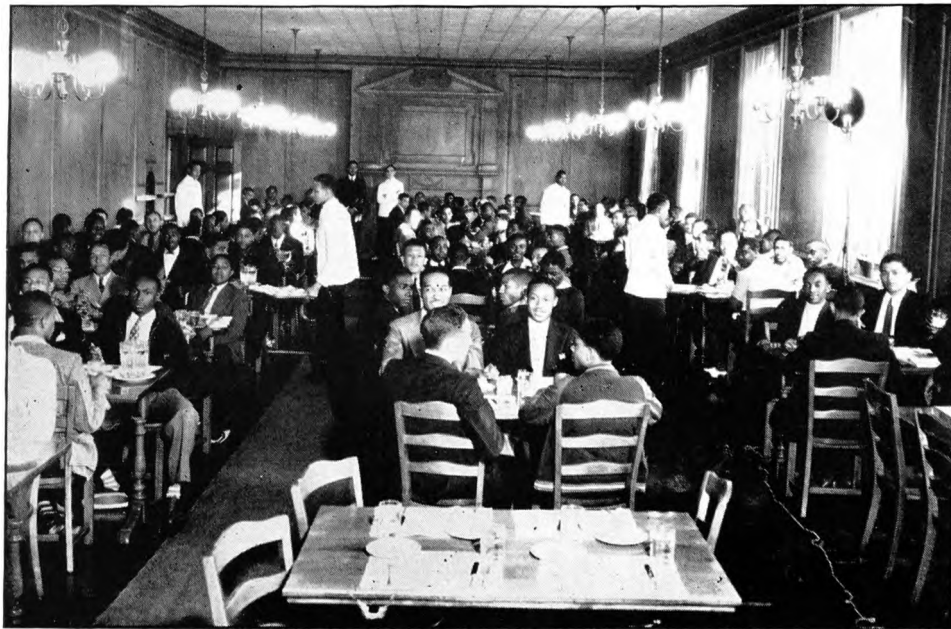

ADMINISTRATION BUILDING

Situated at the east end of the campus facing in-campus is the building that houses the offices of the administrators of the institution. One of the beauty spots of the campus, the Ad building maintains its beauty in spite of the presence of the Dean's and Bursar's offices.

PREXY'S HOME

Across campus from the Science Building and Sale Hall stands the building that all Morehouse men have learned to respect. Housing the President and his family, this moss-covered edifice, shaded by the beautiful trees of the campus has been the victim of many a discordant college serenade.

A. U. DINING ROOM

Here the men of Morehouse show their undying respect for the Napoleonic dictum, "an army moves on its stomach."

To the dietician, Mrs. M. D. Kennedy, should be given the credit for the undying interest of the students in this haven.

LIBRARY

Storehouse for the books that contain the knowledge that we are seeking, there stands at the north-east end of the campus the Atlanta University Library that houses all the books for the schools of the affiliation. Here men go on day after day learning how little they know about everything.

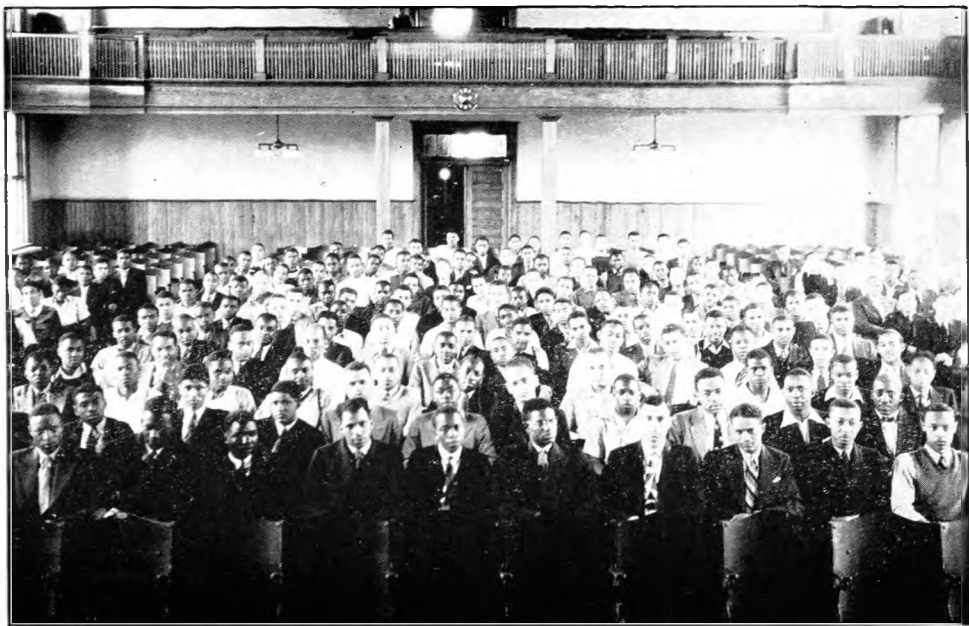

SCIENCE BUILDING

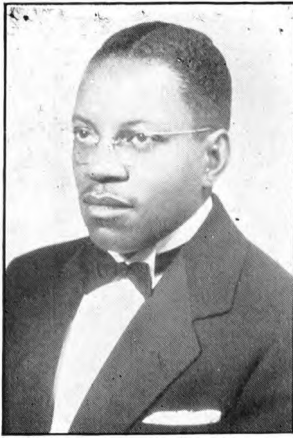

Situated across campus from the President's home the Science Building has won for itself the reputation of having made more minister's than any other building on the campus. This is the building where many men have gone down in defeat, but its mere existence proves the integrity and perseverance of Morehouse men.

CHAPEL

Herein the students of the school with such a great heritage meet to worship each morning. Guest speakers are numerous and the messages that the men of the college receive here follow them throughout their lives. The compulsory factor has ceased to be a bone of contention and men relish the opportunity to hear the inspiring messages given them here.

"a tale told by an idiot..."

In September of 1934, there came out of promenading high school classes an expedition of green, awkward men, seeking to ascertain the veracity of "et facta est lux."

First days on the campus were made interesting by the presence of a vociferous, all-knowing individual who had dubbed himself "the mighty tyrannical Czar." The class fell prone to its first bit of unorthodox organization as a result of his efforts when barricades were constructed on the third floor of Graves Hall to withstand the attacks of the Sophomores who felt that the way to instill "spirit" in a freshman class was through the "board of education." The battle raged: the freshmen were defeated. The Class of '38 emerged sore, but happy.

Having brought with them their "foibles, idiosyncracies, versatility, taste for originality and love for democracy," the Class of '38 immediately began to assert itself as a definite motivating force in the life of the institution. Members of the class found their ways into the Maroon Tiger, Chi Delta Sigma, Y. M. C. A., Glee Club and Orchestra, University Players, and the many other varying campus activities.

The challenge of the "spirit" of the upperclassmen was accepted and members of the class locked arms with them as they strolled about the campus serenading the stars. By the time June, 1935, rolled around the bond of fellowship had grown so strong among the members of the entire student body that parting tears were suppressed only by a gritting of teeth.

Among the archives of the class were placed such memorable names as "Sonny" Kirtley, "Kat" Harris, "Czar" Huffman, "Br'er" Johnson, "Deacon" Satchell, "Geech" Moore, "Tota" Pierro, "Bill" Thomas, "Flash" Tubbs, "Wonderful" Hill, "Fairy Queen," "Hill-billy" Dawson, "Jimmy" Nix, "Tarzan" Brown, and many others too numerous to record, all of whom had distinguished themselves in some commendable manner.

When "ol' faithful" in the tower of Graves Hall tolled the knell of a new year in September, 1935, the class reassembled to have another try at "knowledge is light." The receding effects of the much-talked-of and more-severely-felt depression took its toll and among those who failed to answer the roll call was the "Czar." His absence was mourned at a meeting over which "Deacon" Satchell presided.

Being sophomores, acting sophomorically, struggling amazedly with our first taste of real college studies, the class fought a valiant battle to maintain itself in the presence of the new freshman class. In the class room, athletics, debating, fraternities, and other activities, the men of '38 began to huc to the line: the quips were of little consequence.

The opening of the school year 1936-37 found the class again suffering telling losses. Many found it necessary to meet the wolf without benefit of the cherished A. B. Several fell victim to ignorance--of various sorts. The irreparable losses were appeased only by the arrival of the Bethune-Cookman delegation that brought the crooning twins, Ernest "Peanut" Ponder and Edward "Cuffe" Strickland and the inimitable Bernard Milton Jones. "Tubby" Washington and "Chippy" Swain joined the ranks along with Roland (not the famed tenor) Hayes and "Ike" Meadows, who came from eastern universities to lend their talents to the success of the Class of '38.

In the middle of a series of activities that were resounded by the then popular "music goes 'round and 'round," the class and the entire University System was stilled in its tracks by the very untimely death of our leader, benefactor and friend, Dr. John Hope. The class paid its meager tribute in a floral offering to "our fallen Captain" and accepted the daily routine dazed by the vast proportions of the irreparable loss the nation had suffered.

Like all graduating classes, this class has talents of which it is proud. Among its accomplishments the class records: a twice-selected All-American football player, a host of honor students, three champion basketball players, two founders of a national society, a champion tennis player and innumerable other outstanding characters who have proved their mettle in trying situations.

The group of men who came four years ago to obtain the knowledge that is light now stand on the threshold of a venture into a new world and a new life.

"'Profound knowledge we have yet to gain,' but we have gained experiences, contacts and conventions that will make us stronger."

We, the Class of 1938, feel that in time to come we may be able to do our bit toward relieving all this suffering and heartache in our country. "We are no prophets, but we expect to become the end of that prophecy that speaks of outstanding careers!"

As the day of commencement draws near, the members of the class stand about the campus scarcely able to realize that the four years have passed and the work is done. But, of one thing we are fully cognizant: that we have a great heritage to observe, and each members of the class has pledged himself to think on't, bearing in mind:

"There is a tide in the affairs of men,
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;
Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows, and in miseries.
On such a full sea are we now afloat;
And we must take the current when it serves,
Or lose our ventures."

"'Tis in ourselves that we are thus or thus."

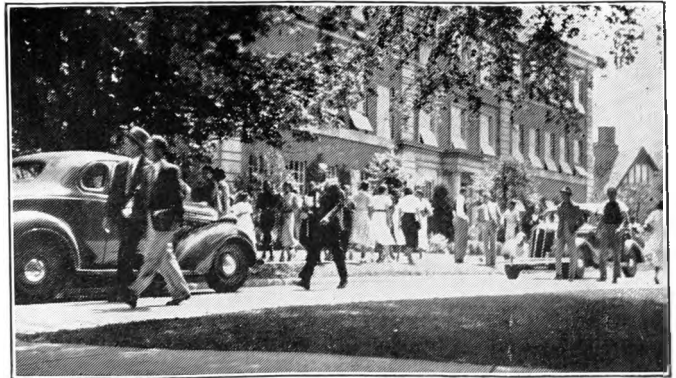

MRS. J. B. STEWART
Hostess

As hostess of Graves and Roberts Halls, Mrs. Stewart has won for herself an enviable spot in the hearts of the students. Having only been a member of the staff for the past two years, Mrs. Stewart has wrought many constructive changes in the dormitory life of the school. As she supervised the cleaning of the walls and floors, Mrs. Stewart has kept a weather-eye out for signs of homesickness among the younger boys. Many a homesick youngster has been invited to afternoon cookies and lemonade, heard the plaintif melodies of her ancient but effective organ and forthwith forgotten his nostalgic pangs.

We like to pay tribute to Mrs. Stewart because we know her to be a gentlewoman. We know that she has a gentle voice and an understanding heart. We know that she has come to be integral part of the life about the campus and it is our sincere hope that she always will be.

"To develop among the students of the three schools, Atlanta University, Morehouse College and Spelman College, an interest for dramatic literature. To sponsor a play writing contest each year in which members of the three schools may enter. To present plays of historical and dramatic value."

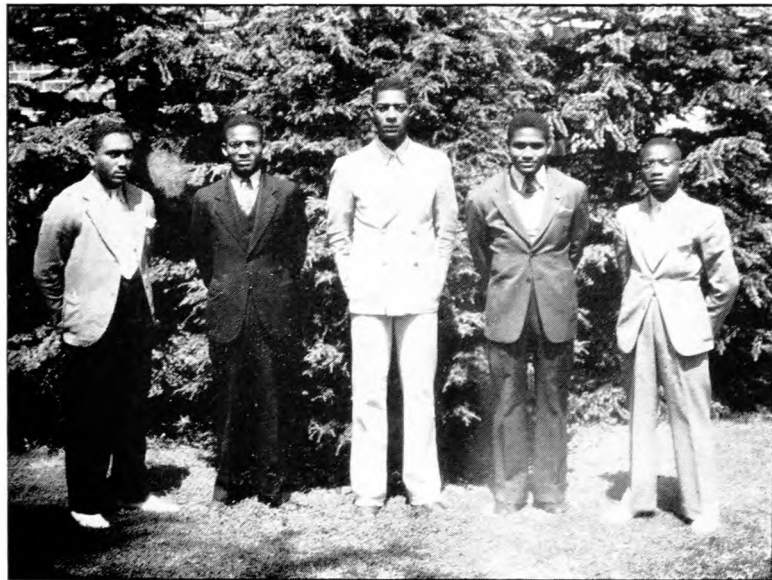

The organization was founded in November, 1931 under the supervision of Miss Anne Cooke of the Department of Fine Arts, Spelman College. Through the past seven years the organization has distinguished itself as one of the most popular and influential activities of the affiliation. In 1935, Mr. John McLinn Ross came to the Spelman Department of Fine Arts from Yale University and the combination of these two talented dramatists gave the University Players unexcelled leadership and its work took on an added significance. Much credit is due the charming Miss Cooke and the amiable Mr. Ross for it is through their efforts that the campus populace can often be heard saying, "the play is the thing."

include five other chapters spread strategically along the east coast and reaching into the State of Missouri. With some of the nation’s leading personalities at the head of its Advisory Council the organization bids fair to become one of the leading organizations of its kind in the nation. Morehouse is justly proud of its founders who have proved themselves capable of accepting the challenge that is handed to them in the great heritage of the institution.

"To serve as an organization representing a cross-section of the personalities of the campus. More social than intellectual, the organization proposes to serve as a laboratory for the dissipation of excess energies of students that do not participate in athletics."

The organization was established at Morehouse during the school term of 1931-32 and has lived through the intervening years through an evolution of members that have proved that without faculty supervision young college students are capable of maintaining themselves in an organization without benefit of charter, constitution, by-laws or ritual. The fellowship that exists between its members is a credit to the institution in which it lives and at other institutions where bodies of the same nature are existent.

In recent years the organization has placed certain scholastic requirements on its membership that the instigators believe will make for a higher degree of scholarship and win for the organization the commendation of its observers.

THE MENTORS

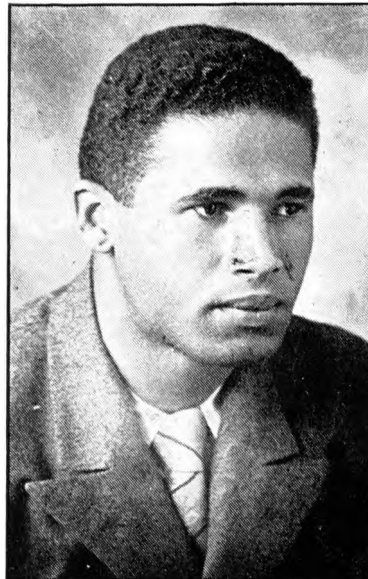

To the left of this commentary appears the picture of Coach Frank L. Forbes, coach of the Maroon and Tiger squad, who has for the past ten years directed the destinies of the football, basketball and track teams at Morehouse. He has earned for himself a reputation of clean sportsmanship, impartiality, and has trained eager young men to fairness in victory and defeat. He has enabled Morehouse to achieve an enviable position among colleges of the conference in the field of athletics.

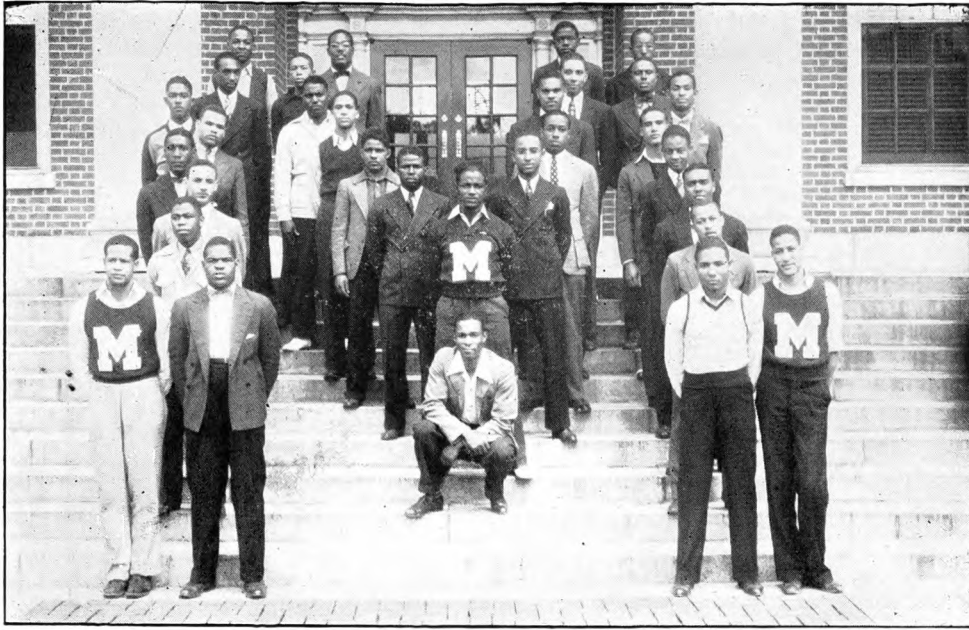

To the right of this space killing jargon appears the likeness of Coach Howard Archer, whose amiable personality and thorough knowledge of the fundamentals of the game of life as well as the rules of competitive college sports has served as the sword of stout Achilles in helping our Coach maintain the enviable record that our teams boast.

The coaching staff during the past season was increased with the addition of Assistant Coach Vernon Smith who after having spent four years fighting his heart out for the Maroon and White has returned to do his bit toward guiding the destiny of his alma mater. Coach Smith's friendship with the fellows has placed him in an enviable position among the members of the staff . . . his name elicits among the athletes of the school a desire to hear the harrowing tales of the spilling of blood on the red hill that he is so adapt at telling.

The “M” Club

“To serve as an organization to bind together in bonds of good fellowship all men who have won the cherished “M” in any of the athletics offered as extra curriculum activities. Only persons who have won the M are eligible to membership.”

The Golf Team

The Golf Team is new to campus life, having entered student life for the first time this year and won quite a name for itself in intercollegiate competition. The golf team in its infancy has won the cherished title of Runner-Up in Conference competition.

○ ○ ○ ○

As we reach the closing pages on our final publication for the academic year, '37-'38, the Maroon Tiger wishes to say a word of commendation and pay tribute to one of the institutions most beloved personages. Dr. Charles Hubert who has so adequately acted in the absence of our dear president, Dr. Archer, is an individual who elicits from the lips of every student of the institution high words of praise and sincere appreciation for his friendship. Through his kindness and understanding, Dr. Hubert has become endeared in the hearts of all Morehouse men.
