Take 'Bama State Hornets

Bird's-eye View of Morehouse College

TIGERS vs. HORNETS

By B. D.

The mighty Maroon Tigers are in tip-top form to take the invading Alabama State Hornets.

The Tigers completed three successful weeks of practice two weeks ago, and met the Morris Brown Wolverines in their first game of the season October 13. In this second game the Tigers intend to turn back the Hornets for the third successive year.

Behind the line the Tigers have brain, brawn and power in Dunson, O. Smith, Petty, Thompson, and Slack. The line skill of Broadnax, Johnson, Robinson, Cook, Jackson and Daniels will check the Hornets' sting.

This year the Maroon Tigers number thirty-seven. This first post-war team is built around nine returned letter men. They are Robinson, Daniels, Broadnax, Johnson, Jackson, Sook, Smith, Dunson and Peters.

We know these fellows; and we know what they can do; so let's cheer them on to take the 'Bama Hornets in a big way.

OUR PART

Often I have heard Morehouse referred to as being threefold in composition, with no one part more contributing to the whole than another. The administration, faculty, and student body do make up the college family, but not equally. The administration seldom leaves the campus as such. The faculty infrequently leaves the city as such. The student, on the other hand, takes Morehouse with him all over the world. If the administration does a good or poor job in providing food, shelter, and medical care for those enrolled in the college, how is it enrolled in the college, how is it made manifest? By the appearance and gtness of the students? If the faculty does its job correctly and completely, how does the public know? By the intellectuality and aptness of the students. If you hear people say Morehouse men are gentlemen, or rogues, or stupid, or witty, who impress them so? The

A HINT TO THE FRESHMAN

By Chas. V. Willie

As the freshman departed from his home, parents or guardians were constantly reminding him to be careful, to study hard, and to avoid trouble. Yes, this is good advice. But the freshman is usually unable to remember it, after the tramp of fast-moving feet, the echo of juke box music, and the voices of strange people have pounded upon his ears for three or four weeks.

The fact that the freshman forgets the advice of his parents whom he has lived with for sixteen or seventeen years suggests a question. Has he lost respect for and faith in his parents' teachings?

No, he hasn't lost a thing. The truth is that he has acquired something. The freshman has received a new picture of life. Unfortunately, he does not realize that college life (as it is today) is a false representation of real life and its problems. No longer does he enjoy going to church (childish practices, elementary and high school). Filthy language rules his vocabulary;

"WE ARE DRIVING TOWARD THE STARS"

"We are driving toward the stars," a statement made by President Mays in an issue of the Morehouse Alumnus, should be the motto of every true Morehouse man as well as the president.

This job of carrying Morehouse to the heavens is a threefold project. It is no stronger than the third side. The administration, the faculty, and the student body must put their shoulders to the wheel and continue to push until this great intellectual caravan has reached its place at the apex of this skyward road.

We have a responsibility not only to ourselves but to the late Rev. H. L. Morehouse, who said, in an address to the student body many years ago, that the name of Morehouse had always been clean and that he was expecting the men of Morehouse College to keep it clean.

It is, therefore, the ultimate responsibility of the Morehouse student body to assist in this journey.

In this column we shall discuss means by which the student body and the individual student may sup-

FACULTY

A new staff position, that of director of dormitories, created this year at Morehouse College, was filled by the Reverend Alfonso L. Lowry, an honor graduate of Morehouse in 1939. In addition to his duties in the three dormitories, the Reverend Mr. Lowry is on the faculty of the School of Religion, teaching courses in American and European Church History. The new appointee is a former pastor of the Massachusetts Avenue Baptist Church in Cambridge, Massachusetts. He received the B.D. degree from Andover-Newton Theological School in 1942, and spent a year each in graduate and professional study at Boston University and the Harvard University Divinity School.

Other appointments to the faculty and staff of Morehouse are as follows: Dr. Henry McBay, a recent graduate of the University of Chicago with the Ph.D. degree, has joined the chemistry department; Miss Wynona Moore of New-

SOCIAL DEVELOPMENTS

William McGill

The purpose of this column is to keep the students informed as to social activities, announcements, and to give general information concerning what, where, and how to do little things. There is a definite need among the students of Morehouse for the brushing up of both intellect and behavior.

As usual, the freshmen enjoyed the activities of the first few weeks of school. The Freshman Get-Together,—here each student had a chance to tell whence he came, why he came, and what he expected to achieve while at the College. Thursday evening, September thirteenth, the "Y Rec" was officially opened. A representative from each state had a chance to tell something about the development of his state; now, the most exciting evening of the whole week came, the evening spent with our sisters at Spelman College. At this affair, the fellows had an opportunity to meet the variety of young women at Spelman College and to show the many talents both groups possessed; the time finally arrived for advice. Each adviser had his advisees to enjoy the evening at his house. At this affair, the fellows were told about the many advantages that Morehouse College offers. The next two events took place at the home of the President. Dr. and Mrs. Mays entertained the freshmen at the annual tea. The Old and New Student Reception was given by the Y. M. C. A. Here, the new students were told about various activities and their functions.

DON'T BLAME US

It has been learned from the most reliable source that each teacher in the system receives a textbook order about two or three weeks before school opens. This being true, why don't the teachers be as efficient as they would have us? We are all aware of the class time lost because of the lack of books. It would be a poor business practice to buy as many books as there were students in a certain class last year, but an average could be made. If just ten students in a three-hour class had books, the students could get assigned work. If I didn't have all my books, I would really do some bawling out.—(Ed. Amen.)

lish; and Miss Wilma Mercedes Bristow of Effingham, South Carolina, and a graduate of South Carolina State College, is the new dietitian.

Dr. McBay is a graduate of Wiley College and Atlanta University, and a former member of the faculty at Tuskegee Institute and Wiley. Miss Moore is a graduate of Talladega College and Atlanta University, and during 1944-45, was a graduate assistant at Morehouse. Miss Clark, a Spelman graduate in 1943, was also graduated from Atlanta University in 1945. She will serve as a full-time teacher of reading.

Four regular members of the Morehouse faculty have returned this year after having been granted leaves of absence. Professor Walter R. Chivers, of the department of sociology, has been guest professor at Hampton Institute and Dillard University; Coach Franklin L. Forbes, who is in charge of physical education, has been working with the U. S. O.

Reverend George D. Kelsey, of the department of religion, has been working towards the Ph.D. at Yale University; and Dr. James D. Tyms, of the personnel staff, has been studying at Columbia University.

TRAINING

"Training is everything. The peach was once a bitter almond; cauliflower is nothing but cabbage with a college education."
 —Mark Twain.

Another college year has ticked its way around the clock of time, and we turn our thoughts towards things of an intellectual and academic nature.

The world situation has and always will have an effect on college men and women who are in the process of being molded into forms already influenced by heredity and environment from which character is to be made.

From the results of the war we see daily, in ever-growing numbers, young men who have been absent from school and community activities for a long time and are now back in college for more knowledge and training. It is not hard for us to recognize these young men at one glimpse, for on their left lapel there is a gold emblem which distinguishes them as honorably discharged veterans from our country's service.

War's end apparently has blinded many people to the real situation—to the fact that war's aftermath presents human problems just as numerous and just as complex as war's duration. The administration and the student body must not fail to show gratitude for the sacrifice of the veterans and an appreciation of their problems as they return to their search for truth.

It is the scholars who are to shape the form of things to come; therefore, it is necessary that they must be cognizant of all that is going on in the world today; they must be aware of the possible outcome of all the conferences dedicating themselves to everlasting peace; they must be sensitive to the fact that thousands of the peoples of the world have not had the opportunity for the broadening that comes with (or should come with) knowledge. Education, therefore, is never something to be taken for granted or accepted blandly.

Students of Morehouse and Spelman Colleges and other great institutions of higher learning should consider themselves indeed fortunate to be surrounded by an atmosphere of inspiring knowledge. However, there are many who are in school for numerous reasons: there are those who are here by force, or because they have nothing else to do; there are those who feel that a college education will enhance their social standing; there are those who are here simply to learn from books or to take verbatim lectures from the instructor; then there are those, and very few, who are not only getting the rigid academic training a college education offers, but invaluable lessons in integrity, self-expression, self-discipline, and good "common sense" as well. Every bit as important as the opportunity for higher education is a sound and healthy attitude toward that educa-baudy jokes are the subjects. That beautiful altar of respect for womanhood has been suddenly blown out of his life by a storm of barbarism; only discourtesy is left. He is partially blind.

Before we plunge into the cure for this disintegration of character and ideals, let us remember that the power to check the growth and spread of this decadence does not lie alone within one person. Scores of men created it, and scores of men must change it. But the desire to become a member of the crusade lies entirely within the individual freshman.

Now let us consider how a freshman may close his door to his false concept of propriety and collegiate decorum. He does not have to become a hermit to do so. The "house by the side of the road" is a fine fort. And the most destructive weapon in this warfare is willpower. If a freshman has the willpower to turn his back to laziness, gambling, stealing, liquor, swearing, and boorishness, he will have conquered the enemies that murder the character of college men.

It is not for the potential socialite or the "nothing-else-to-do" idler that colleges exist, but for the earnest, conscientious student eager to equip himself for whatever challenge a chaotic world may offer.

The stimulation of a healthy attitude towards education is no easy problem; parents and educators have long grappled with it. Especially in the recent war years has the question, "How can an interest in and an appreciation for education be best aroused?" assumed preponderous proportions. War wages and the draft seemed doomed to settle the issue once and for all.

The burden of arousing a healthy interest in education cannot be left wholly to the parent or teacher; it is up to the student himself to awake to the realization of the need for higher learning. He must decide between the merely appealing and the lasting values offered him in college. It has been said that a "rolling stone gathers no moss," but there is no theory which states that once the stone stops it cannot gather moss.

So, since the student of today will inherit the world of tomorrow, skills and techniques should be learned now so that when the time comes he will be ready to use them in building the free, fair, and prosperous world for which our boys fought students. So you see, Mr. Student, that you are, in a large sense, the best third of this college family.

On your shoulders rides the future of Morehouse College. Wherever you go in future years, you are representatives of Morehouse. However, people judge you and your acts, they also label Morehouse. Your character from this day on is that of the Morehouse man. When you accepted the brand "A Morehouse Man," you gave yourself in exchange.

Now that you know you are Morehouse, how shall Morehouse be? Shall it keep reflecting the deeds of yesteryears to impress people today? Shall we keep blowing dying embers of a long past glory to make the TORCH glow brightly now? No. We are to perform, not as our brothers of yesterday, but better. We are to heap upon the TORCH more victories and conquests that will render the College an eternal beacon for all who follow us. Yes, this is what we desire to do (less than we CAN do); but we must do this—and do it, well.

OVER THE FENCE

By I. C. All

The material for this column is received by me verbally; therefore, the editors cannot be held responsible for anything I might write. If you fall into the spotlight unjustly, you may have any statement made about you corrected by writing the editors. So, clear the floor, I want to talk some more.

A lot of upperclassmen lost their Spelman girls to the class of '49!! What do these "Atomic Age" kids put down??

Well, Andrew Gray, Ruth must have shown you that a rooster is in no sense equal to a peacock. Try elsewhere, lad.

Bryant Britt, you are either robbing the cradle or the grave. Why don't you leave that little Clark freshman alone, because Claretta says you might not think of that chic in size; but behold the difference in facial attributes.

Leroy Broadnax, don't tell us that you went to church the other night because you wanted to do so.

Lloyd Hepburn seems to be trying to pick up what Caldonia is putting down. He knows where it is; it's just too steep.

James McArthur, you should stop running after that little girl down at Bryants. It couldn't be love you're after, so it must be those sandwiches she makes.

How is Claude Marshall going to punch the clock at Morehouse, South with Johnnie, Morehouse, North with Marie, and then hop over to Clark with an excuse for Nettie?? Tell us about it, boy.

Melvin Hudson, who was the young lady you were trying to smuggle off the campus the other night? That's all right, we won't tell on you.

Well, Edward Larry finally lost the presidency of the B. D.'s Union. The freshmen are bidding so high for this office now; it is hard to say who will take the chair.

Dining with men of Wilberforce is a costly thing, say Doris and Ruth; but Ben Dobbins and ANDREW Terrell say it saves Them cash. I wonder if they got their frat pins back???

J. C. Lumpkin and Fred Cureton were about to clash over Nana Patterson. Did Evelyn Leach know this? Well, she'll never know.

The Jrs. and Srs. at Spelman are so nice lately it almost scares me. Of course, the coming election of Miss M&W has nothing to do with it.

What goes between "Snake" Moseley and Naomi Coles, eh?

Finus Bennett, will you please stop running around here trying to find a girl. Consult the B.D.U.; they might be able to help you.

James Montgomery, how is the mail coming in from Fisk? I know you haven't received as many letters from that party as one of our editors (TEN)?

Robert Franklin seemed to have had Eunice Hines hypnotized the other night in the library. Tell me what you use, boy.

I know this won't get to the printer, but I'll say it anyway. Adlert Cartman was talking about quitting his of so long, who wants to pick up? (Ed. Note—I fooled you, jerk.)

Joe Williams and Caroline Smith must have put down much more than shoe leather last summer from the way she acted while he was here. Don't you read this, George ALLEN.

Lloyd George, no one wants your girl, so give her a little rope.

Jon Hall, we see you in the dining hall; you don't have to create such a disturbance to be noticed.

Melvin Carroll, did you see your girl in the company of a C.P.O. the other Sunday? Check on that, kid; it looks bad.

Well, we have used all the space given us, so we'll have to get back to the business of the next issue. You don't know me, but I know you; so be careful of what you say and do, because I see you all.

P. S.: In all seriousness, I would like for anyone having definite information concerning the 18 to 1 Morris Brown-Moorehouse incident to drop by the staff office with it.

KAPPA ALPHA PSI

Pi Chapter of Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity swings forward this year under the able leadership of Polemarch Wm. Jefferson, with many varied activities planned for the year. Officers and members for the year are:

- Vice-Polemarch.....Fulton Bradley
- Keeper of Record, Cleophus Lumpkin
- Keeper of Exchequer, Claude Marshall
- Strategus.....Adlert Cartman
- Lt. Strategus.....Ulysses Johnson
- Historian.....John Anderson

Andrew Gray, Edward Larry, Leaverone Harley, Arthur Clark, Abraham Peterson, Donald Jefferson, William Terrell, John Riley, Edward Blackshear, and Onlie Hardnette.

Anderson and Hardnette have been honorably discharged from the armed services, but have been replaced by chapter members Preston Cochran, William Drake, and Stephen Sheppard.

BUSINESS AND LAW CLUB

The Business and Law Club is composed of Business majors and pre-Law students. The purpose of this organization is to help students interested in these fields plan their courses of study and present to them the problems facing the Negro businessman and lawyer today. Too, the club has very informal meetings with prominent persons in these fields, to get practical out-of-the-classroom advice and suggestions.

To those interested in participating in our organization and its activities, the club extends a most sincere invitation.

The officers for the year are: Earl Robinson, President; Adlert Cartman, Vice-President; Robert Calloway, Secretary; William Clark, Assistant Secretary, and Andrew Gray, Treasurer.

ROBERT CALLOWAY.

Y. M. C. A.

Thursday, September 13, marked the beginning of the Y. M. C. A. activities on the campus. For the past few years it has been in the plans of the organization to have a special clubroom. On Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock the formal opening of the club and recreation room was held with a fellowship hour honoring the Freshmen of the college.

On Friday, September 21, the first meeting of the "Y" was held in the clubroom. The meeting was largely attended by the new students, and the program for the year was presented by the cabinet.

Some activities planned for the year are: Special chapel programs, discussion groups on world affairs and problems, projects of community interest, Y. W. and Y. M. Annual Reception, and several fellowship hours. The Y plans to participate in several conferences which will be of interest to all Morehouse men. A special feature of our activities of interest to every Morehouse man will be announced as soon as final plans are completed.

The Old and New Student Reception, sponsored by the "Y," was held on Friday, September 22, at the President's residence.

The October chapel speaker for the "Y" was Reverend J. C. Wright, pastor of the First Congregational Church.

OMEGA PSI PHI

Psi Chapter of Omega Psi Phi Fraternity welcomes all new students and returning Morehouse men. It is a desire of this chapter that all students end the school year successfully.

Psi Chapter has made many elaborate plans for the coming year, which it intends to follow through to every extent. And as is customary, Psi Chapter will be a positive contributing organization to the welfare of the college.

The Chapter goes forth this year under the leadership of:

- Robert Clarke.....Basileus
- Leon Martin.....Vice Basileus
- Jon Hall.....Keeper of Records & Seals
- Finis H. Bennet.....Keeper of Finance
- Andrew Terrell.....Chaplin
- Walker Brown.....Keeper of Peace
- George Baldwin.....Chapter Editor
- Benjamin Dobbins.....Dean of Pledges

Supported by: John Adams, Bernard Baker, Benjamin Barbour, William Beck, Leroy Broadnax, Charlton Caldwell, Fred Cureton, Sanford Dunson, Linza Ford, James Gambrell, William Golightly, Charlie Graham, Leon Hall, Robert Hatch, Powell Holly, Marvin Jackson, Norman Jenkins, Eugene Jones, William McGill, Damon Peters, Moses Petty and Lee B. The Maroon Tigers in Action

THE FIGHTING SPIRIT OF THE FOOTBALL TEAM

Morehouse has always had fighting teams—from the time that Samuel Archer produced championship teams to the time B. T. Harvey broke all S. I. A. C. records. Yes, Frank Forbes has produced teams with great determinations; but never before in Frank Forbes' coaching career, or in the history of Morehouse, has there been a football team with a fighting spirit that surpasses that of the team of '45-'46. Why does it have such a spirit?

First, the fellows have faith in their coaches, who are doing all they can to make them victors. The coaches work hard physically, mentally and morally, trying to teach their men new techniques and skills.

Second, they have confidence in the support the administrative officers, faculty, colleagues, alumni and friends will render in every respect. We are with them—win, lose or draw. If ever they feel that we are not by them in defeat as in victory, they should hang up their uniforms and bid football farewell, because they would have nothing for which to fight.

Third, and probably most important, each individual player feels that he is responsible for the destiny of the team. He knows that the past athletes of Morehouse have paved the way for him on the gridiron, and he shall keep it a glorious path for others to follow. Former coach V. C. Smith says, "The test of a team is not when it can win all the time, but when it can win, lose, and then come back to win again."

You can readily see why the team of '45-'46 shall fight hard to keep the famous Maroon and White above the fog; and why it shall face each foe with exemplified courage, incomparable determination, and sincere willingness hard to equal anywhere, at any time.

Samuel Cook.

COACH FRANK L. FORBES

SPORT PARAGRAPHS

B. D.

The Tiger enters the grid war rather late this season, but this gave him more time to prepare for the opening tilt against the Morris Brown Wolverines.

How will Dunson fare without Edwin Smith? These fellows have been teammates for the past six years; in this time, they have worked as a unit. Will Dunson's performance suffer? I think not.

Fans, not one, two, or three, but eleven men plus some, make a football team.

Watching Petty on the "iron," you wouldn't believe that he went through Washington Hi without so much as feeling a football, would you?

Parker Hi (Birmingham, Ala.) turned out some pretty good players in Thompson and Harris. Thank you.

Edwin Smith, Clarence Littlejohn and Maurice Moore are continuing their football careers with the Ft. Benning Reception Center Tigers. Look for them.

I think that the teams "above" will have a little more respect for us "under" after the Clark Panthers did all but take Wilberforce's uniforms.

Well, fellows, we get back to that old question: What did you come to the game to see—Caldonia, or the team in action? Those fellows down there aren't playing for exercise. Give them your undivided attention until the pistol cracks the second time. Don't forget!!
