Morehouse Celebrates 148 Years of Black Male Excellence

BY ADD SEYMOUR JR

t was in the evenings, inside the basement of the Springfield Baptist Church, when the light began to shine.

Forty students were in the first classes at what William Jefferson White founded as the Augusta Institute in February 1867.

Now, 148 years later, that institution has evolved into Morehouse College and celebrates a long history of developing and producing men who have influenced history and the world.

This week, the College has been commemorating White's work with the Founder's Day celebration: from Cornel West's Founder's Day Convocation speech, to honoring men who have made significant marks in the world, to remembering the spiritual base of the College during Sunday's worship service.

Henry Goodgame '84, director of Alumni Relations and the chairman of the Founder's Day Steering Committee, said this year is special as West and Candle Award honoree U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder are part of the celebration. "Both of them look at what impacts African American men, the African American community, from two different vantage points," he said. "They are very prominent in the social activism space when it comes to black males, so it's appropriate that they come to Morehouse during a time when the plight of African American males has been such an issue."

Holder is one of six men who will be honored with a Bennie or Candle Award during the 27th Annual "A Candle in the Dark" Gala on Saturday evening. The others are Robert Crews, Thomas Moorehead, Paul Judge '98, Grant Hill and Eugene Wade '92. They also will speak to students and the public during "Reflections of Excellence" Saturday at 11 a.m. in the Ray Charles Performing Arts Center.

The Rev. Joe Samuel Ratliff, senior pastor of Houston's Brentwood Baptist Church, will end the four-day celebration with the Founder's Sunday Worship service in King Chapel.

A number of other events will take place throughout the next few days. Goodgame said it all points to the excellence that White and others saw for the future of what has become Morehouse College.

"We celebrate the African American male and we're going to give you every example of why," he said. "That's what we do at Morehouse."

Moot Court Team Becomes First HBCU to Win National Title

Rodje Malcolm, Professor Winfield Murray, Emmanuel Waddell

BY ADD SEYMOUR JE

IN ONLY THEIR second year of existence, the Morehouse College Moot Court team is now the best in the country.

The team defeated defending champion Patrick Henry College 3-2 to claim the 2014-2015 national championship at the American Collegiate Moot Court Association's 2015 national tournament. The event was held at Florida International University in Miami, Fla., Jan. 16-17.

The Morehouse team of Rodje Malcolm and Emmanuel Waddell, the only team from a historically black college or university in the competition, became the first HBCU squad to win the national title. They did it by defeating a Patrick Henry College team that had won the title seven years in a row.

Malcolm and Waddell were the nation's only team to go undefeated for the entire academic year.

"Rodje and Emmanuel are stellar students who worked extremely hard to win this competition," said the team's coach, Winfield Murray. "They represented Morehouse superbly and without fault."

"Schools across the country have recognized that moot court better prepares students for law school and law careers than any other forensic program," he said. "Students have to understand judicial precedent, how to brief case law, how to argue appellate matters before the U.S. Supreme Court and how to address a tribunal en banc. These skills are normally taught in law school, so we are well ahead of the curve in preparing our lawyers of tomorrow."

Tech Platform Upgrade to Provide State-of-the-Art Technology at Morehouse

"THERE ARE

TWO THINGS WE

ARE GOING FOR

- MORE CONSIS-

TENTLY

TECHNOLOGY ...

EFFICIENCY."

BY ADD SEYMOUR JR.

THE COLLEGE'S information technology infrastructure is in the midst of a huge improvement program, primarily through the $6.8-million Technology Platform Upgrade project.

Spearheaded by gifts from members of the Morehouse College Board of Trustees, the project is an effort to raise money to create a state-of-the-art technology platform at Morehouse.

Integral in making the upgrade happen have been Board Chair Robert C. Davidson

Jr. '67, the Board's development committee chair Dale E. Jones '82 and committee member John Wallace.

John Wallace.
Nearly $3.8 million had been raised by late January through an anonymous donor, board members, gifts from corporate partners and $700,000 in Microsoft software that came as a grant from the Thurgood Marshall College Fund.

Those gifts are already being used for things such as making needed improvements to Banner, implementing new residence hall software and drastically improving Wi-Fi access across campus.

"There are two things we are going for – more consistently reliable technology wherever you touch technology and greater efficiency," said provost and senior vice president for Academic Affairs Garikai Campbell.

"In the past, I think we have been plagued with the question of could you rely on a piece of technology being up and running at a particular moment," he said. "Our hope is for people not to be thinking about whether or not it's going to be out or whether it's going to be up. So reliability is one really key feature.

"Also, I think greater efficiency because we have a lot of processes that are manual or by paper," Campbell said. "We are trying to move away from that so we can have greater efficiency in the way we do things. Some of that means not > just implementing new software, but doing the process redesign that goes along with it."

President John Silvanus Wilson Jr. '79 charged Cliff Russell, the College's chief information officer, with evaluating the College's technology infrastructure strengths, weaknesses and needs.

After his evaluation, Russell has begun implementing many of his suggestions.

"The major thing we are going to see are radical improvements in our management structure," he said. "Things like Blackboard, Banner and Banner Mobile. Students are going to see tangible user tools that they simply did not have before. They'll have Banner Mobile so they can better manage their course schedules. They will have a much easier access to technology through the network refinements that we'll be able to put into place, and it will all be secure."

Dalton Becomes New Morehouse Police Chief College's First Female Chief to Focus on Community Policing

BY ADD SEYMOUR JR.

WHEN VALERIE DALTON first joined the Atlanta Police Department as an officer in the late 1980s, she made it clear that she didn't want to sit behind a desk.

"I stood toe to toe with everybody," she said. "I was on the streets. I did the chasing. I did all of those things. I was determined that I was not going to be looked at as a female, but as a fellow officer."

It's a mindset that propelled her up through the APD ranks during a 27-year career where she eventually became a major and zone commander.

She's now blazing a new trail at Morehouse, as she has become the first female to be sworn in as the College's police chief. Dalton also becomes the associate vice president for Public Safety.

"I am confident that we have chosen the right person at the right time for the right assignment, and that's our new chief," said President John Silvanus Wilson Jr. '79.

Dalton said she understands the significance of being the first female chief, but she is focused on providing a safer campus for the Morehouse community, especially students.

"It's a great opportunity for me to be part of a team that is responsible for securing and providing a secure atmosphere for future leaders," Dalton said. "That's a wonderful thing to have the opportunity to do."

A Cincinnati, Ohio, native who moved to South Georgia as a youngster, Dalton wants to tackle an issue plaguing many of the nation's HBCUs - decaying communities that surround them.

Her answer comes in community policing, a concept that Dalton said makes community stakeholders partners with law enforcement in proactively combating crime.

"That's one of the things that I'm definitely excited about doing here because even though we're providing this atmosphere of safety and security, students should understand that they have a part in it," she said. "And I think the best way to do that is to develop things where there is some connectivity and partnerships. I'm excited about making sure that happens and there is not that disconnect between the police and students here on campus."

Dalton took her new post on Jan. 5 and was officially sworn in by Fulton County District Attorney Paul Howard '72 on Jan. 27 during a ceremony in the lobby of the Martin Luther King Jr. International Chapel.

"Here in the audience today are a number of other law enforcement officials," Howard said. "We have had an opportunity to work with Valerie and to see her excellent performance over a number of years and under a lot of very pressing circumstances. So we want you to know that you have selected an outstanding candidate."

King's Legacy Commemorated in January With Speeches, Music and His Own Words

MOREHOUSE STUDENTS have the ability to change the world, Ben Jealous told a group during his Jan. 16 Martin Luther King Jr. Lecture Series speech in the Bank of America Auditorium.

But they first have to get organized, he said.

"If you look at any movement and see its future, look at the position of young people in that movement," Jealous said. "If young people are... kind of on the side, that movement, which could be extraordinary, is destined to be mediocre. If young people are pushing their way out front, it's probably headed towards being successful.

"Social media activism is important and starting your own thing is important," he said. "But at the end of the day, you've got to figure out how to get organized. Figure out what you want to change about this world and get organized."

Jealous, the former national president of the NAACP and currently a member of the Morehouse College Board of Trustees, gave an address that was part of the College's monthlong celebration of Martin Luther King Jr. '48.

A number of events were held across campus to remember King's legacy through books, music and his own words.

"I was very excited about how the month of commemoration turned out because it was really important to revisit King's legacy this year, especially in the context of all the events happening in the nation and the world, such as what happened in Ferguson, Missouri," said Vicki Crawford, executive director of the Morehouse College Martin Luther King Jr. Collection."

King's own words were on display during a King Collection Open House in the Woodruff Library on Jan. 26.

The Ritz Chamber Players gave the concert, "Ties That Bind: From Swastika to Jim Crow," in the Emma and Joe Adams Concert Hall of the Ray Charles Performing Arts Center. Students discussed the book Bloody Lowndes: Civil Rights and Black Power in Alabama's Black Belt with author Hasan Jeffries, an associate professor of history at The Ohio State University on Jan. 22.

The Rev. Rafael Warnock '91 spoke during the Martin Luther King Jr. Sunday service in the Martin Luther King Jr. International Chapel. During the service, oil portraits were unveiled of King's sister, Christine King Farris, and Juanita Abernathy, wife of one of King's confidant, Ralph David Abernathy.

On Jan. 21, award-winning film legend Danny Glover, who stars in the movie "Supremacy," took part in a question-and-answer session with the film's director, Deon Taylor, and Stephane Dunn, director of the Morehouse Cinema, Television and Emerging Media Studies Program.

The Rev. Richard Willis Sr., pastor of First Baptist Church of Hampton, Va., gave the annual King Day Crown Forum in King Chapel on Jan. 15.

"Dr. King was born for that world, but Morehouse I've stopped by to remind you of your birthright. You were born for this day. Don't let anybody turn you around. Don't let you turn you around. Don't let your doubts turn you around."

WADE is a social education entrepreneur who founded UniversityNow, a social venture that operates New Charter University and Patten University. Both are online, self-paced institutions that provide affordable, accredited, post-secondary education programs for working adults. Prior to founding UniversityNow, Wade was co-founder and CEO of Platform Learning, a tutoring company that served tens of thousands of low-income students throughout the United States. He also was founder and CEO of LearnNow, a school-management company that managed urban charter schools and public schools.

CANDLE IN ENTREPRENEURSHIP Robert Benjamin Crews Jr.

President and Chief Executive Officer, CREWS OBA Crews of California, Crews Enterprises and Airport Retail Management

CREWS opened his first retail outlet – The House of Paper Mache, a card and gift shop – in East Orange, N.J., in 1969. Sleeping on a cot in the back of the store to make ends meet, Crews saw business expand, opening a larger store in downtown Newark. That led to an airport official asking him if he'd be willing to open a store in the Newark Airport. He eventually converted his card shop into an airport bookstore business that flourished not only in Newark, but airports across the country. Crews was one of the first airport concessionaires to mix retail and food businesses. He sold that business, and now runs Airport Retail Management, which has 14 outlets at Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport and is opening shops in airports in Los Angeles and Washington, D.C.

Tim Sams Looks to Enhance Morehouse Student Development Model

BY ADD SEYMOUR JR.

IT'S IRONIC that Tim Sams, the College's vice president for Student Development, has always wanted to be an interior decorator, specifically on Afrocentricity.

Just as the Chinese concept of feng shui in interior decorating focuses on creating spaces that cultivate growth and development, he is looking forward to building a campus culture that develops and cultivates the growth of Morehouse Men.

"Morehouse has the culture to create that Morehouse Man," Sams said. "The challenge is refining our ability to do that, being very clear about what those outcomes are and what the processes are that enable us to achieve those outcomes... I just have to get us to make sure we are clear about what we are doing and doing it in the best way possible. That's exciting to me."

Sams, who hails from upstate New York, has spent 23 years in student development and student services at Swarthmore College, New York University-Abu Dhabi and Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute.

He comes to Morehouse looking to enhance the idea of a student development model that's as unique as Morehouse.

Sams said that model looks to develop an academically strong student who is just as strong in character, but with the traditional Morehouse ideals of spirituality, leadership and career focus.

"I've always wanted to do that here," he said. "So I see the past 23 years as preparation for this place for me."

To develop those kinds of graduates, Sams is focused on creating an environment that targets three areas.

"First, the school needs a solid financial foundation," he said. "My area plays squarely into that, from an enrollment standpoint and a housing standpoint. So I want to make sure we are meeting our goals, our targets, with regards to those things. When we do that, everybody benefits.

"Second, embrace. President Wilson has made it very clear that we are expected to achieve a better embrace. So the first couple of things along that line that I'm seeking to do is to realize a residential college model. Attached to that is restructure the way our deans operate because they are the drivers of that embrace.

"And finally, create an environment among my division of professionals that continuously enhances their ability to be consummate professionals. I am of the belief that the more you develop, the more you support the success of your staff, the better they are going to be for your students. So I'm keenly interested in how we do that. I want top-flight, high-powered staff, and I'm interested in creating an environment that creates those folks."

Morehouse to Host Nation's Top African American Officers During First Military Crown Forum

BY ADD SEYMOUR JR.

A NUMBER OF PEOPLE told Asante McCalla, a junior sociology major and a member of the Morehouse Navy ROTC unit, that there was no way to get four African American flag officers on campus at the same time.

Flag officers, some of the U.S. military's highest-ranking members, must be nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate. And only 5.5 percent of them are African American.

"It's like having four CEOs of the nation's biggest companies here, only that these are people managing the lives and safety of millions of people in this and other countries," he said.

Despite the naysayers and the logistical challenges, the impossible will happen at 11 a.m. on March 26 during the College's first-ever Military Crown Forum in the Martin Luther King Jr. International Chapel.

Representing the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines, four of the nation's highest-ranking African American military leaders will tell students about their lives and careers. They are:

- Rear Admiral Sinclair Harris, vice director for operations for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Washington, D.C.
- Maj. Gen. Stayce D. Harris, commander of the 22nd Air Force, Air Force Reserve Command, Dobbins Air Force Base, Georgia
- Maj. Gen. Leslie Smith, Commander General of the United States Army Maneuver Support Center of Excellence, Fort Leonard Wood

 Lt. Gen. Vincent R. Stewart, Commander, Marine Forces Cyber

Harris is a three-star general while the others are two-star generals.

Also attending the Crown Forum will be area military officials, high school and college ROTC units, and the Atlanta University Center Veterans and Military Affinity Group.

The Military Crown Forum is a student-led event. McCalla, along with Mark Ellison, a junior international studies major and Army ROTC member; Matthew Diedonne, a junior economics major and Navy ROTC member; and Georgia Tech Air Force ROTC member, Jordan Rodgers formed the ROTC Joint Services Committee and worked with Crown Forum committee members.

"We want to expose students to the fact that there is senior leadership in the military who looks like them," McCalla said. "And we've never had a military Crown Forum before. We always hear that if you want to be successful, become a lawyer or a doctor or a businessman. Rarely do we hear about the influence of the military and how there are great Morehouse Men who have been part of the military."

Talented, But Young, Basketball Maroon Tigers Among the Best

BY ADD SEYMOUR JR.

GOING INTO THIS BASKETBALL SEA-SON, head coach Grady Brewer '80 knew he had a talented team, albeit a young one.

So far, they've lived up to both

The Maroon Tigers are among the top teams in the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference this season, going 9-2 in January, and knocking off first-place Paine College along with most of the contenders in the SIAC Western Division. They sport the league's top defensive team and one of the best rebounding.

The only stumbling block has been losses to teams such as Fort Valley State, an Eastern Division cellar dweller, and bad losses at home to Benedict, Stillman and Claflin.

Brewer points to things that he says young teams often have problems with.

"Three things down the stretch that we've been concentrating on," Brewer said. "I'm looking for us to be a better free-throw-shooting team, not missing layups and taking care of the basketball.

"But so far, I'm pretty happy," he said. "Like anything, it takes time for them to gel with one another and I think we're getting there. It's still not there, because of the inconsistency. But I think this team has a very good future ahead if they stick together, learn how to share the ball and commit to picking up the pennies."

Picking up the pennies is one of the mantras that Brewer repeats often at Forbes Arena. It means taking care of the little things, he said, which allows them to take care of monies - such as layups.

His team leans heavily on dynamic freshman guard Tyrius

Walker II, a business administration major from Atlanta, who leads the team in scoring with 13 points a game, Inside Tyrone Brown, a 6' 9" junior center from Millen, Ga., is among the SIAC's leaders in rebounding, averaging eight per game.

Another integral part of the Maroon Tigers success this season hasn't set foot on the playing floor, Brewer sald. Bigger and louder crowds at Forbes Arena have allowed Morehouse to be third best in attendance in the SIAC this season. It's also given the Maroon Tigers a strong home-court advantage.

"The crowd has been tremendous this year," he said. "Our kids have really appreciated it. I asked earlier that everyone create the sixth man, and I'd like to say 'thank you' to everybody this year for coming out. We just want to continue to build on that."

FOOTBALL

Twenty-Two Sign to Play Football on National Signing Day

WITH A FOCUS on getting larger on the offensive and defensive lines, and adding depth to the quarterback position, Morehouse football coaches signed 22 players on National Signing Day in February.

"I would have to say by far this is the top class that I've been involved with since coming to Morehouse," head coach Rich Freeman said. He credited the support from President John Silvanus Wilson Jr. '79, who said he committed coaches to finding some talented football players.

"We weren't very big or able to run the football when we needed to on like third and short or first and 10. Those are downs that pretty much can help or hurt the tempo, pace and continuity of an offense. So we got bigger as a football team, and I'm very happy with that."

Coaches also signed two quarterbacks, Keilan Knight from Birmingham, Ala., and Taylor Brown from Austin, Texas. Knight is a threat both running and throwing the football, while Brown was a sought-after recruit.

The Maroon Tigers picked up 10 commitments from the state of Alabama, part of Freeman's strategy to renew ties in that state.

"Back when we started the program in 2007, we got a huge thrust from the state of Alabama just with connections that I had and defensive coordinator George Copeland has as former coaches at Alabama State," Freeman said. "We kind of got away from that and kind of focused on Atlanta and Georgia. But I wanted to get back to Alabama, so with the 10 signees, I think we have reopened some doors for us that will be beneficial.

"Overall, I think we were able to accomplish pretty much everything that we set out to," Freeman said. "This is the first time since I've been here that we are basically done with recruiting at this point. I'm very excited and looking forward to getting them into fall camp."

Pattillo Inducted Into Decatur High School Wall of Fame

Athletic Director Andre Pattillo '79 was inducted into the Decatur High School (Ga.) Wall of Fame on Jan. 16. Pattillo, a multi-sport star athlete at Decatur High, was honored for his athletics accomplishments as a football and baseball player at Morehouse, his 20-year career as a college basketball official and his years of service as director of Admissions (1996 to 2000) and athletic director (2000 to present) at Morehouse.

BASEBALL

Coach Mitchell Excited About 2015 Maroon Tigers Team

MOREHOUSE BASEBALL coach Robert Mitchell couldn't wait for the 2015 season to get started.

Since going a competitive 9-28 last season with a strong, young nucleus, and after adding some talented new players, the Maroon Tigers have been eager to start the 2015 baseball season.

"This team has a lot of potential," Mitchell said. "We're still dealing with some of the things that we've dealt with in the past - a little immaturity. But other than that, this team has more potential than any team we've had for the last four years."

One of the biggest problems for the Maroon Tigers last season was a lack of pitching depth. They've added three new pitchers in Darron Bowling, Cole Gibson and Anthony Dodd.

"All three of them are throwing the ball quite well right now," Mitchell said. "If they can continue to throw the ball they way they are throwing it, we'll reap the dividends when we get to conference play."

Mitchell also pointed to two outfield newcomers, Jared Manner and Justin Stephens. Manner is hitting over .600 this season while Stephens has been solid at the plate in the field.

They join returning sophomore stalwarts in catcher Zachary Lowe and 2014 All-SIAC outfielder Caleb Pyscher to form a solid young nucleus, while Ryan Christian rounds out a solid outfield.

"We are playing better," Mitchell said. "Our early record doesn't really indicate it, but we're doing things that we feel will pay dividends when we get into conference play."

What I Do

66 I am the first person you see when you walk into this office. I meet everyone from campus visitors on tours, to students, to faculty members. So I'm the greeter for this office, which really isn't something that's hard for me. I spend most of my time keeping up with Dean John Haynes' meetings, his travels, correspondence, requests for letters of recommendation, classes and his mentoring of students. I make sure he has his schedule and that he follows it.

I really love interacting with students because they bring a wealth of diversity and intelligence from every realm that you can think of. Most of these young men are medical school-bound, so they have a huge challenge, as their program is extremely rigorous. So students really need mentoring, not just during midterms or finals, but every day. 99
