Ensuring Spelman's Continued Ascent

One of the highlights of launching my tenure as Spelman's 10th president has been the opportunity to get to know so many accomplished alumnae, faculty and students. Even before my official start in August 2015, I traveled to Florence, Italy, in May for a landmark conference, Black Portraitures: Imaging the Black Body and Re-staging Histories. The event was a showcase of some of the world's most exciting scholars, artists and thought leaders, among them an impressive number of Spelman alumnae and faculty.

After settling into Reynolds Cottage in late July, a circuit of alumnae engagements took me to numerous cities, including New York, Philadelphia, Montclair, Detroit, Louisville, Oakland and Los Angeles. At each stop I witnessed testimonials from Spelman trailblazers in the fields of medicine, law, public office, academia, entertainment and the arts. One of our featured Messenger articles, "Renaissance Alumnae Create Multiple Career Paths," captures some of the excitement I encountered during these visits. The professional versatility of these alumnae highlights the resilience of their liberal arts Spelman education.

This inaugural semester has brought with it as well the opportunity to host almost a dozen listening sessions at Reynolds with over half of the Spelman faculty. In addition to being experts in their respective disciplines, our faculty members are also often experts in the field of teaching and learning. The article "New Curriculum Offers Opportunities for Deeper Intellectual Discovery" documents some of the many ways in which Spelman faculty are making strides in the area of teaching and learning. Throughout the issue, you'll also see examples of dynamic programming further integrating the arts via curricular and co-curricular opportunities.

Finally, my encounters with students have been inspirational. Spelman women are incredibly diverse. As I lunched with student government members, Pauline E. Drake or Exxon Mobil Scholars or joined members of Afrikete, social justice scholars, Navy ROTC or Women in Discernment of Ministry, I was stuck by the fact that the Spelman sisterhood is a rich multidimensional mix. One of my favorite student engagement events has been a book club I hosted at Reynolds with students and faculty alike. We read Ronald Chernow's biography of Alexander Hamilton and early in the new year we will travel to New York City to see the Broadway musical by Lin-Manuel Miranda based on Chernow's book.

Another important engagement with students has been our work together to make sure that the campus is educated and aware about Title IX rules and regulations, and is conscious of ways that the entire Spelman community is cognizant of all we can do to be supportive of individuals who might encounter sexual misconduct or sexual violence of any sort. Our women are equipping themselves with the intellectual and disciplinary firepower to change the world, beginning with their own campus.

Our capacity to innovate and develop women who go on to change the world is, of course, directly related to maintaining our strong financial position. The philanthropic support of a broad community of alumnae and friends is therefore critical, and I offer sincere thanks to the funders recognized in the enclosed annual Report on Philanthropy. Collectively, you have supported Spelman's ascent to this auspicious time and place, and we are grateful for your investment.

Mary Schmidt Campbell, Ph.D.
10th President, Spelman College

SPELMAN MESSENGER MARKS 130TH BIRTHDAY

When the first volume of the Spelman Messenger was published in March 1885, Spelman College was still Spelman Seminary. According to the editorial on the front page, the student enrollment was 575 and the board and tuition was $7.00 per month with a $2.00 extra fee for instrumental music. The school year ran from October through May. In contrast, there are 2,088 students currently enrolled at Spelman. Our school year runs from August through May with full year's tuition, fees, room and board totaling $38,751. However, there is much about the College that has remained constant. In 1885, Spelman Seminary noted in the Messenger that "the progress of the students is something wonderful." The editorial content of this 2015 issue of the Messenger certainly reinforces this claim.

RARE BLUE ELEPHANT!

As a G-STEM (Enhancing Global Research and Education in STEM at Spelman College) scholar, Ebone Monk, C'2016, traveled to Chennai, India, to conduct G-STEM research in 2014. Based on her global experiences, the physics major created a video titled "G Stem India" of herself and another physics major, Mekhakhem Kheperu, C'2016, conducting research in the Indian Institute of Technology Madras, Alternative Energy and Nanotechnology Laboratory. Monk noted that riding an elephant was one of the highlights of her trip. Did she really see rare blue elephants? Setting the record straight, Monk confessed to enhancing her photo through digital manipulated magic. This year she traveled to Glasgow, Scotland, for her Summer 2015 G-STEM research at the University of Glasgow. Her project involved combining nuclear physics with engineering, coding (data analysis) and computer-aided design.

2015 NEW STUDENT ORIENTATION

At the conclusion of new-student orientation activities designed to facilitate a smooth transition to the campus community, over 500 first-year students of the Class of 2019 were greeted by President Mary Schmidt Campbell on the campus oval. The new class and their parents gathered in the shade between the Alumnae Arch and the Grover-Werden Memorial Fountain. Later, first-year student Farris Christine Watkins, the fourth generation of the Martin Luther King, Jr. family to attend Spelman College, posed with Dr. Campbell, along with her mother Angela Farris Watkins, Ph.D., C'86, and her grandmother Christine King Farris, C'48. Farris Christine Watkins' great grandmother was Alberta Williams King, HS'22.

RETIRING FACULTY HONORED

In May, seven retiring faculty members were honored for their years of dedicated service to Spelman College. Representing a wealth of wisdom and knowledge were (left to right) Anne Bradford Warner, Ph.D., associate professor of English and director of the Comprehensive Writing Center; Christine W. Sizemore, Ph.D., professor of English; Daryl White, Ph.D., professor of anthropology and chair, sociology and anthropology; M. Akua McDaniel, Ph.D., C'69, associate professor of art and art history; Lawrence Schenbeck, D.M.A., professor of music; and Barbara L. Carter, Ph.D., professor of sociology. Anthony Dahl, Ph.D., associate professor of Spanish, and chair, world languages and literature, is not pictured. The event was held in the Camille Olivia Hanks Cosby, Ed.D. Academic Center Auditorium.

THE CENTENNIAL REUNION 1915 - 2015

Celebrating her 50th reunion, Marian Rucker-Shamu, C'65, applauded her Spelman sisters during the 2015 Reunion Convocation: "Spelman: The Light Shines Bright." In keeping with the theme of the convocation, Minister Allyson Smith, C'2005, a Spelman admissions counselor, delivered an inspirational address and later welcomed her aunt Gwenevere Pearson Allen, C'2015, with a big hug and congratulations for being the 12th person in their family to graduate from Spelman.

HOMECOMING 2015 COMPETITION

Returning for Homecoming 2015, alumnae were welcomed with the traditional ultimate tailgate experience. This year nearly a thousand sisters partied with a purpose again by participating in the annual homecoming residence hall competition. These alumnae made a gift to Spelman online and then selected the residence hall that best matched their affinity currently or while at Spelman. Abby Aldrich Rockefeller Hall won first-place honors with 253 votes. Howard-Harrelld Hall captured second place with 241 votes, followed by the Donald and Isabel Stewart Living and Learning Center I with 113 votes.

2016 DISTINGUISHED VISITING SCHOLAR

In September, award-winning dancer, choreographer, and arts historian Dianne McIntyre began her tenure as 2016 Distinguished Visiting Scholar with a presentation titled “Dancing on Solid Ground: Reflections of a Choreographer’s Journey.” She described this examination of her work as “a colorful life centered around a passion for dance, theater, music and film.” An artistic pioneer, McIntyre has a career spanning over four decades of choreography for scores of concert dances, four Broadway shows, 30 regional theater productions, a London West End musical and three feature films. McIntyre’s individual movement style is shaped by her affinity for cultural histories, personal narratives, bold music and poetic text. In 1972, McIntyre founded the dance ensemble Sounds of Motion in Harlem and later started the Sounds of Motion School.

SIGNATURE EVENTS CELEBRATE PRESIDENT TATUM

In April 2015, a number of events celebrating the successful 13-year tenure of President Emerita Beverly Daniel Tatum were highlighted with the dedication of the Beverly Daniel Tatum Suites. Following the naming ceremony, Rosalind

SPELMAN MUSEUM FEATURES HOWARDINA PINDELL

This fall, the Spelman College Museum of Fine Art presented "Howardina Pindell," a solo exhibition featuring the paintings and drawings of outspoken New York artist, writer, curator and professor Howardina Pindell. An influential figure in the art world for over 40 years, Pindell is known for creating oblong and unstretched canvases that are often torn apart and stitched back together. This video drawing "Boxing" is an example of the artist's detailed experimentation with hand-written numeration that considers the relationship between chaos and logic, time and relationship, and force and movement. Currently an art professor at the State University of New York, Stony Brook, Pindell was associate curator of prints and illustrated books at the Museum of Modern Art and is the co-founder of A.I.R. Gallery in Brooklyn. She is the author of In The Heart of the Question: The Writings and Paintings of Howardina Pindell.

REMEMBERING REVEREND RATES

On April 18, 2015, the community celebrated the life and legacy of the Reverend Dr. Norman M. Rates, dean emeritus of the chapel and professor of religion over a 48-year period. Having established the spiritual foundation of the campus and ensured a sound moral and ethical community for generations of Spelman women, Rev. Rates died on Easter Sunday morning April 5, 2015. Memorial gifts have been directed to the Norman M. and Laura Rates Endowed Scholarship. In the postscript of his book May Thy Dear Walls Remain – Memoirs of a College Minister at The Sisters Chapel Spelman College, he left us with these familiar parting words:

"In your joy and in your sorrow; in your plenty and in your need; in your going out and in your coming in; may God be with you from this time forth and even for evermore. Amen." – N. M. RATES

PROFESSOR LEAVES LEGACY OF EXCELLENCE

Remembered for 55 years of dedicated and excellent service to Spelman College, B. LaConyeya Butler, Ph.D., C'56, died August 20, 2015. Prior to her retirement in 2014, Dr. Butler had been a tenured professor through five Spelman presidents and a previous chair of the department of psychology. She was involved in many of Spelman's signature programs including the College's honors program, women's studies, the Women's Center, the assessment of student learning program, counseling services and the faculty governance system. During Founders Day 2003, Dr. Butler received the Spelman College True Blue Spirit award. In Dr. Butler's memory, gifts have been requested to be made to the Oran W. Eagleson Scholarship Fund or the NAASC Donald M. and Isabel Stewart Endowed Scholarship at Spelman College.

book NOTES

Renaissance Alumnae

Create Multiple Career Paths

A rapidly evolving job culture provides opportunities for Spelman women to do it all.

BY RONDA RACHA PENRICE

In 1978, long before the Internet, social media or TED Talks even existed, Nobel Prize- and Pulitzer Prize-winning American novelist Toni Morrison ended her Spelman College commencement address with these prophetic words, “You are women. You don’t have to choose between marriage or work, a career or children.”

She asked, “What is the history of Black women in this country?”

Then she answered, “We did it all. We were energy and passive, we were travelers and haven, we were warship and safe harbor. We did it all.”

Finally, Morrison urged, “I beg you. No matter what anybody tells you, do it all, my sisters. Do it all.”

In 2015, Spelman sisters Talithia Williams, C’2000, Jennifer Harper, C’75, Calida Garcia Rawles, C’98, and former Spelman exchange student Marci Peterson (2007–2008), are taking Morrison’s words to heart. As having more than one career becomes the norm, alumnae are exploring a full range of multifaceted possibilities and job potentials. Each of these Spelman women has dynamic multi-faceted careers: a mathematician and healthcare advocate, a doctor and actress, an artist and social activist, and a publisher and computer scientist. Indeed, they do it all.

“It was my first time being exposed to a history of Black people that showed us in a different light, definitely a more positive light.”

Talithia Williams, C’2000

Data Yields Endless Possibilities

Columbus, Georgia, native Talithia Williams, C'2000, had no idea she would add "doctor" before her name when she arrived on Spelman's campus nearly 20 years ago. Not only did she not realize that Black women got Ph.D.s in mathematics, she didn't know much about the historical accomplishments of African Americans either. Taking African Diaspora and the World, Spelman's signature interdisciplinary core course better known as ADW that every student experiences in her first year, changed her perspective.

"It was my first time being exposed to a history of Black people that showed us in a different light, definitely a more positive light," revealed the Harvey Mudd College associate professor of mathematics. "I remember some of the books we read, especially The Wretched of the Earth, Quicksand and Passing. I just remember thinking that these weren't books that I was reading in high school or middle school. I wasn't exposed to Frederick Douglass or Benjamin E. Mays or all these great Black scholars. The picture that I had prior to coming to Spelman was 'okay Black people were slaves' and that was it. So having this class my very first semester was such an awakening that we're so much more than we're taught to believe."

Today, Dr. Williams easily could add her own name to that historical list of accomplished African Americans, as her career as a mathematician led her into healthcare advocacy. Using her professional experiences that include research appointments at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, the National Security Agency, and NASA, Dr. Williams created statistical models that emphasize the spatial and temporal structure of data with environmental applications. As a result, she developed a cataract model used to predict the cataract surgical rate for developing countries in Africa. The mathematician's breakthrough research has garnered her a following outside of the scientific community. Her popular TED Talk, Own Your Own Body's Data, has received more than a million views.

With this new breed of high-tech self-monitors (capturing heart rate, sleep and steps per day), Dr. Williams makes a compelling case that measuring your body's data daily can reveal much more than even your doctor may know. She concludes her talk by encouraging her audience to take charge of their personal health by making this simple request to their physician, "Show me the data."

Talithia Williams, C'2000

Dr. Jennifer Harper, C'75

Balancing Dual Careers

Dr. Jennifer Harper, C'75, has been balancing two demanding careers as a medical doctor and an actress long before ADW existed. Most recently, she's been the on-screen mother to Kelly, one of the three main female characters on the TV One comedy Born Again Virgin. Dr. Harper explains that her dual careers reflect the interdisciplinary values embodied by Spelman, as well as by her parents, who were both school principals.

"My parents thought very much interdisciplinary," she said, "but they called it a different word; it was being well-rounded, and the most important part of getting an education was to make sure you were well-rounded."

And that well-roundedness was very much a part of Dr. Harper's Spelman experience. "I would go and start a chemistry experiment and run across the yard to Read Hall and do a ballet class," she recalled. "I always had food to nourish me in whatever my interests were and it's funny because I'm still doing that. I'm an actor who lives in Atlanta. I trained in London at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art just to get the Shakespeare under my belt and I did that after my medical training."

Instead of the obstetrician/gynecology track she did in her residency at Emory University School of Medicine, the Morehouse School of Medicine graduate practices occupational medicine and cares for male and female inmates at a correctional facility, in addition to other medical duties. She's even landed roles in which art and real life collide. From 1990 to 1994, she played Dr. Winona Day in the television version of In the Heat of the Night, based on the film about a Black police detective working with a white police chief in a southern town not keen on the changing racial climate.

Painting Her Point of View

Calida Garcia Rawles, C'98, author, illustrator, fine art artist, and graphic designer, directly credits the education she received at Spelman for molding her into the full creative professional she is today. "I was able to take many classes in the English department," said the art major originally from Wilmington, Delaware. "I also took many cross-registered business classes as well, so here I am working for myself."

Calida Garcia Rawles, C'98

At Spelman, she found that she was multifaceted and could do many things, and that has not stopped. “I’m writing a young readers’ book now,” explained Rawles, who lives in Los Angeles. “But I’m also illustrating and painting and work as an art director for public policy, so I have to read these certain public policy reports and figure out how they need to look and sometimes help with editing.”

Rawles said ADW exposed her to the “diversity without our Blackness” and thanks Spelman for that enlightenment. “We would read all the same things, but it wasn’t like we were all on the same page,” explained the author, who created the 2010 children’s book Same Difference about two first cousins who learn to appreciate their physical differences. “I had some of the most amazing debates with students about religion, about our role coming over from Africa, all different things that I assumed all Black people thought, which is a horrible concept and something you’re kind of taught. When you’re the only one or looking at television, you think that we have one kind of mindset. When I went to ADW, I really did feel the diversity.”

As an art major in 1997, Rawles was one of the student interns to travel to Portobelo, Panama, where she participated in the Spelman College Summer Art Colony program. Currently, she is working on a series of paintings and works on paper, titled “Behind the Veil.” The portraits examine gender identity in the context of marriage.

Startup Spirit: Do It All

Coming to Spelman from the mostly white Chapman University in Orange, California, as an exchange student during the 2007–2008 school year was certainly a change of pace for Maci Peterson. The tech entrepreneur has received a great deal of buzz for conceptualizing the app “On Second Thought” that “unsends” text messages. As an entrepreneur and innovator, Peterson won a $50,000 award in July 2015 for the first Women Startup Challenge Pitch Competition to fund her app. Spelman greatly impacted the liberal arts-minded Peterson, who founded and served as editor-in-chief of her own magazine for Black women, Mwari Magazine, while in college. “Spelman taught me who I am, as an African-American woman in general, but it also taught me my role as an African-American woman in the world, which is something I had never thought about,” said Peterson, a brand manager for Marriott International. Those lessons, she insisted, instilled her with a confidence that fuels her to this day.

“Spelman taught me that I’m not the next so and so... It’s my job to be the best me I can be.”

Maci Peterson, exchange student 2007-2008

New Spelman Curriculum Offers Opportunities for Deeper Intellectual Discovery

The College's latest offerings are designed to open the minds of the freethinking Spelman woman to new ideas.

The Interdisciplinary Big Questions Colloquia

To enrich students' first year core curriculum experience, this fall Spelman introduced the First Year Colloquia, also known as the Interdisciplinary Big Questions Colloquia. Students with interests outside of their major were able to combine several disciplines via IBQC's course offerings, which span English, Women's Studies, psychology, sociology, anthropology, chemistry, biology, the arts and history.

Meeting weekly and based on the intellectual passion of the professor, "the colloquia provides a forum for faculty to engage students in explorations of topics that excite the imagination—something that gives the first-year student a glimpse into the types of questions that are posed in the liberal arts college environment," said Myra Burnett, Ph.D., interim provost of academic affairs. "These colloquia are led by our faculty who are passionate about a subject area, and willing to demonstrate what Spelman advocates as one of the outcomes of a liberal arts education—the ability to examine and critique ideas from multiple perspectives, in search of meaning."

Students are encouraged to participate in colloquia that challenge them. Their colloquium experience is intended to be far-removed from their major and unlike their own culture. The class should move them to explore new methods of questioning, inspire them to consider thinking about creativity and performance in a new way, or invite them to read, write and think deeply about a political issue.

Some of the offerings are "Free Thinking Women Colloquia," which are designed to explore Black women's intellectual traditions and their contributions to big questions. "Not all of the FTWC area about race, class or gender," explains Mona Phillips, Ph.D., chair of the department of sociology and anthropology and coordinator of the IBQC. "Students can ponder any question—even those with no answers—and I can guarantee you Toni Morrison, Dorothy Roberts, Angela Davis, or Octavia Butler have engaged the same compelling and significant ideas."

Some of the colloquia offerings include:

Are you mad? An American History of Mental Health Treatment explores the experiences of Black women and the intersection of science and social policy in shaping mental health treatment priorities viewed within historical and cultural context.

Black Lives Matter: My Voice, My Space was created based on responses of Millennials to continuing police shootings of unarmed Black youth. Their various activities have included consciousness-raising, social media campaigns, protests, community building and other practices. While Millennials' activism has been characterized as decentralized, the group challenges critics as romanticizing the Civil Rights Movement or for being out of touch and uninvolved. Examining Spelman's own history of activism documented in the College archives, this seminar asks how each generation defines its own strategies for change.

Black Women Redefined: A Critical Analysis of Contemporary Televised Images acknowledges a new era for Black women in media. "From Being Mary Jane" to "Scandal" to "Empire," women are leading the way in entertainment. Drawing from the teachings of Women/Feminist Studies, psychology, and Media Studies, this seminar turns a critical, as well as celebratory, lens towards these examples and considers how Black women are depicted in popular media, what those images tell us about ourselves and our lives, and how we might push back against images that distort and diminish who we really are and what we aspire to be.

Florence Nightingale: The Science of Caregiving and the Art of Nursing explores the history of caregiving and the science of nursing. Centered on the discipline of history and using Florence Nightingale's book Notes on Nursing, the course uses research and writing from sociology, anthropology, Women's Studies, psychology, biology and the medical humanities.

A scene from the Broadway musical, "Hamilton"

2015-2016 Arts Common Reading Experience and New York Excursion

This fall semester, the Office of the President offered a unique opportunity for students to engage in a collective literary program designed to introduce students to an interdisciplinary approach to the arts and liberal studies. The goal of the Common Reading Experience is to bring a select group of students together to engage in critical interdisciplinary discussions with President Mary Schmidt Campbell and select faculty throughout the semester on the book, Alexander Hamilton written by Pulitzer Prize-winning author Ron Chernow. The biography presents a detailed portrait of Alexander Hamilton as one of the founding fathers of the United States.

From January 5-8, 2016, students will participate in a travel excursion to New York City to see "Hamilton," the critically acclaimed musical written by Lin-Manuel Miranda and inspired by Chernow's Hamilton. With a young multiracial cast, the play draws from several musical genres, including hip-hop, nursery lullaby, rock n' roll, and operetta to uniquely capture the history of the United States and the legacy of Hamilton. While in New York, the students will have the opportunity to meet with Chernow and discuss both the book and play. Upon their return, they will reflect on the program with faculty participants via an evaluation of the Common Reading Experience and New York excursion.

"Music, theater, dance, visual arts, art history, curatorial studies, a museum, and the digital media salon are vital to the creative health of Spelman," said Dr. Campbell. "This demonstration project illustrates how the arts in collaboration with the liberal arts can be a catalyst for new knowledge and new ways of thinking and knowing. The arts play a critical role at Spelman, as we live in a world that requires creativity, resilience, a comfort in risk taking, and, with the rapidity of change in today's world, the exercise of the imagination."

To participate in the Common Reading Experience, students needed to apply to the collaborative effort, which is supported by the Office of President, Office of the Provost, Office of Undergraduate Studies, Office of Student Affairs and other campus partners. The top five majors represented by the more than three-dozen students accepted into the program are political science, theatre/drama, psychology, English and biology.

New Health Science Major

To strengthen Spelman's health-centered curriculum with rigorous interdisciplinary, the College launched the health science major this fall. Fifty first-year students have declared the new track.

"This major is for students who have a strong interest in understanding health on the local, national, and international level from an interdisciplinary perspective," said Rosalind Bass, Ph.D., associate director of biology and director of the Spelman College Health Sciences Program. According to Dr. Bass, the major was developed in response to several institutions, including nursing, dental, and medical schools, expressing a desire to partner with Spelman. The new program will prepare students for careers in medicine, dentistry, nursing, public health, veterinary medicine and all other allied fields.

During their third year, health science majors will complete internships to gain clinical experience. Between their junior and senior years, all health science majors will participate in a global experience.

Peterson's app allows you to recall text messages and has a curfew featuring a delay of the delivery of texts to allow time for the user to rethink sending the message. Peterson attended Spelman 2007–2008.

Maci Peterson
AGE: 28 / APP: ON SECOND THOUGHT

THE APP: Launched last December, On Second Thought allows users to recall text messages. There is even a feature that lets users set a message "curfew"; those texts won't be sent until the next morning, giving you time to reconsider anything you might have written while perhaps under the influence from the night before. "We're rapidly expanding and building a one-stop-shop for all of your mobile communications," explains Peterson. "We're starting with text messaging but quickly developing features for chat, social media and email."

HOW IT GOT TO MARKET: Although Peterson didn't know how to code, she knew her marketing background could help her put together a great pitch. Her proposal was solid enough to land her in first place at a pitch competition held at the South by Southwest festival. Shortly after, she assembled a team to develop the app.

HOW SHE RAISED MONEY: Peterson initially used her own money to cover the development costs; friends and family chipped in before the launch. She has since been courting investors to grow the business.

RISKEY DECISIONS: Not having a coding background was a challenge, but Peterson found great collaborators to support her.

ADVICE: "Follow your passion... find and join trade organizations. Look at people in the field who you admire, follow their stories, reach out to them and ask about how they got to where they are," she recommends.

With both daughters, Brittany Botts, C'2015 (left), and Cameran Stephanie Botts, C'2014, becoming recent Spelman alumnae and starting graduate school this fall, Colette LaViolette Mayfield, C'83 (right), decided to join them. As a chemistry major, Mayfield established her career in Philadelphia as an environmental chemist/regional public health trainer for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency with just her undergraduate degree. However, she noted that times have changed since 1983, and in order to keep up with the job market – and her daughters – she decided that it was time to pursue a master's degree in public health. Meanwhile, Britanny, a Bonners Scholar, is an African American Studies Graduate Fellow at UCLA and Cameran, an economics major, is pursuing a fashion career at Queen Mary, University of London.

The Report on Philanthropy 2014-15

DYNAMIC PHILANTHROPY SUPPORTS AN EXPANSIVE FUTURE

Philanthropy is a cornerstone of Spelman's legacy. All forms of generous giving and support—from alumnae, foundations, corporations, faculty, staff, students and friends of the College—nurture Spelman's ability to merge our proud traditions with expansive future possibilities.

To continue providing an education that prepares women to solve the challenges of the 21st century, this year's total cash and in-kind gifts of $19,518,668 were invested in critical scholarships, innovative academic programming, and sustainable infrastructure, all aligned with the goals that serve as milestones for students. Scholars were afforded more opportunities to engage in meaningful global experiences, undergraduate research and career-related internships. Seventy-one percent of the 2015 graduates experienced global travel and 73 percent completed internships. Spelman students also bonded with alumnae, developed their leadership potential and paired coursework with hands-on community service engagement.

Every gift mattered and had an impact in 2015. Programming for the new Wellness Center at Read Hall was enhanced by a $95,750 grant from Kaiser Permanente to add vital data processing and analytical capabilities to benefit the health of our campus community, more than two-thirds of which registered for membership during the fall semester. A pair of sibling alumnae gave new meaning to the power of sisterhood with a $250,000 gift that funds curricular and co-curricular programming for Spelman students. And the Class of 2015 left a gift of more than $8,000, supporting their sisters behind them as they persist to graduate themselves.

Each gift last year enriched the boundless potential of the Spelman sisterhood, family and community, ensuring a strong foundation for our 10th president, Dr. Mary Schmidt Campbell, whose burgeoning leadership via a 21st century application of the Spelman mission is certain to result in new vistas of possibility, promise and progress.

Supporting Spelman's New Wellness Path

The August 2015 opening of the Spelman College Wellness Center at Read Hall marked a high point in the College's ongoing efforts to empower the entire campus community around health. Based on this fall's membership enrollment of nearly two-thirds of the campus—1,610 students, faculty and staff—the new facility already has made a major impact. The Center includes a multipurpose basketball court, a natatorium, spaces for spin classes and free weights, and a demonstration kitchen for sessions on preparing healthy meals. To support students' fitness goals, the Center offers a number of health services, including dietitian consultation, personal training and boxing classes, as well as group fitness classes like Cycle & Sculpt, Urban Line Dance and Aqua Boot Camp.

Partnerships provide support needed for those Wellness Center initiatives to be successful in improving the personal health of the Spelman community by encouraging life-long wellness practices. In FY2015, Kaiser Permanente awarded the College two grants, totaling $95,750, that focus on automating student health entry forms, analyzing and collecting data to determine health and wellness needs, and creating goals and programs to benefit students when it comes to proper nutrition, physical activity, adequate sleep and stress management. Such investments will have a direct impact on the health and wellness of Spelman's future leaders.

Sisters Pay Good Fortune Forward

Ever since they graduated, Erin Marie Johnson Tolefree, C'2001, and Cara Joan Johnson Hughes, C'2003, have dreamed of one day giving back to their alma mater.

The sisters, who majored in economics, now hold senior executive positions at their family business, Baldwin Richardson Foods Company, a leading manufacturer of custom food and beverage products. This year, Tolefree and Hughes established a $300,000 gift that includes an endowed scholarship so that other young women can also benefit from the Spelman College experience.

"Spelman has given us so much—beyond the education, a sense of confidence and a support network," said Tolefree. "We always said that when we were in a position to give back, we would."

Designed for students interested in entrepreneurship, food science, and food creation, the scholarship provides financial support to defray educational costs and, in the future, will provide internships at Baldwin Richardson Foods.

"We envisioned this scholarship for a young woman who is a foodie at heart—but also an innovator, someone who thinks outside the box," said Hughes.

Spelman is fostering just such innovative thinking through its new interdisciplinary health science major and wellness programs. So far, faculty have created chemistry, biology, and English courses that challenge students to consider the politics and economics, as well as the science of food and health.

With their gift, Tolefree and Hughes want to help take this teaching and learning to the next level by showing students what is possible when innovation meets entrepreneurship.

"At many companies, the food scientist stays in the lab. But where do ideas go when they leave the lab?" asked Hughes. "We want to give students the opportunity to take an idea all the way from concept to commercial brand."

Along the way, the scholars will be mentored by Tolefree and Hughes, who are eager to pay their good fortune forward.

"Part of our mission is to provide exposure," said Tolefree. "We feel very proud to be able to give back to the school that has given us so much."

Legacy is Forever

Sometimes, looking to the past can help bring the future more clearly into focus.

That was the case for Maude Lofton, C'66, a retired physician whose reflections about her time at Spelman College and the education she received inspired her to make a $1 million planned gift to her alma mater.

A native of Jacksonville, Florida, Lofton entered Spelman at age 16. Majoring in biology, she'd planned to be a teacher. But when a family friend introduced Lofton to the field of medical technology, her future took a turn. She went on to earn a medical degree and had a successful career as a pediatrician.

Lofton's work took her away from Jacksonville and her affiliation with the local Spelman alumnae chapter, so she lost touch with the College. Then, in 2006, she returned to Spelman for her 40th reunion. It was the first time she'd been on campus since she graduated. The experience brought back fond memories and prompted her to reconnect and support Spelman financially.

"As you grow older you reflect; it makes you understand and appreciate things," said Lofton. "I was afforded the opportunity for a quality education that prepared me academically for what was ahead – even though I didn't realize what that would be at the time."

Lofton and her sister, Richie Brown Morris, C'71, established an endowed scholarship in honor of their parents and another in honor of their grandmother, who always stressed the value of education and encouraged them to attend Spelman. The gifts are intended to help ensure that Spelman is around to serve future generations of young women.

"Traditions come and go, but legacy is forever," said Lofton. "The legacy of Spelman has to be fostered and sustained. Giving in any amount contributes to those efforts."

Safety Net Support for Success

If you asked Rache'l Oatis, C'2018, what challenge in the world she wants to solve, you might get a variety of answers. The political science major is devoting a large portion of her college career to activities that will help her define how best she can serve humanity.

Over the course of one year, Oatis has served as a student volunteer for the annual Martin Luther King Jr. Day of Service, lead chapel assistant for Sisters Chapel, and as a voter registration aide on Saturdays.

In the summer of 2015, she participated in the fellowship program of the Civil Rights Restorative Justice Project, through which she conducted research on policy initiatives on anti-civil rights violence in the United States from the 1930s to 1950s.

Through these and other service-learning opportunities, Oatis finds that she's growing in the areas of teamwork, problem solving and action planning.

"Hands-on community engagement has allowed me to take an active role in helping shape my community," said Oatis a participant in the Spelman Independent Scholars interdisciplinary study program where she is documenting oral histories through interviewing elder African-American women. "I have grown in my personal growth and self-esteem. Working hands-on in the community has fostered empathy and self-efficacy."

These opportunities wouldn't be possible if Oatis didn't have the benefit of the President's Safety Net Fund, which provides financial support for students who otherwise wouldn't be able to complete their studies. "Financial support is extremely instrumental to my collegiate journey and success," said Oatis, who plans to attend Harvard Law School and later pursue a career in public office, with a focus on identifying educational disparities. "With resources and funding continually being provided, I am assured I will succeed in all my endeavors."

Crossing the Finish Line

Most people who know D'Rita Robinson, C'97, founder of Robinson Family Ventures and the CEO of Chatty Guest, an app that promotes pop-up social networks, know that she credits Spelman College for developing her into the confident, accomplished woman she is today.

Also, they know that because she struggled financially to get through college, Robinson created the Annie Bell Huger Scholarship, named for her grandmother, to support Spelman students who are facing the same challenge.

Inspired by Robinson's commitment to help others and Spelman's success at educating women who become global change agents, an anonymous donor established a scholarship at the College to help close the financial gap for seniors who otherwise would not be able to graduate. The donor named the $1 million fund in Robinson's honor.

Robinson, who was recently named to the Spelman College Board of Trustees, is pleased that the gift in her name is an investment that will pay dividends into the future. "The woman who attends Spelman will change the world," she said. "The fact that she is standing on that ground, that she has been chosen, means that she will go out there and lead."

The D'Rita Robinson Finish Line Scholarship has already been a godsend for 116 students, including Jordan Watters, C'2015, who majored in English and is pursuing a master's degree in kinesiology at the University of Georgia.

"The scholarship made a huge difference," said Watters, who was just $2,000 shy of what she needed to walk across the Commencement stage. "It gave me the assurance of knowing I could still attend Spelman and finish at the school I love."

At Spelman, Watters was conscientious inside and outside the classroom. While maintaining a 3.7 grade point average, she made time to volunteer at Raising Expectations, a mentoring program for middle and high school students.

The establishment of the Finish Line Scholarship was particularly meaningful to Robinson because she identifies with students like Watters who work hard but still need assistance to achieve their educational goals.

"I understand that I am those students," said Robinson, the first in her family to go to college. "When you have that dream to attend Spelman, it's not always easy. I worked several jobs to help pay the way."

"Now I am in a different position. If I can make the road easier for the other D'Ritas out there, that's how I want to use my blessings."

Expanding the Student Global Experience

A complete Spelman College student experience includes international travel. For Morgan Robinson, C'2017, global engagement has meant travel to Amsterdam and Ankara, the capital cities of the Netherlands and Turkey, respectively. Her most recent excursion was a semester in Gaborone, Botswana.

"My time spent in each of these places has given me unique adventures and lessons that will stick with me for a lifetime," said Robinson, a history major, who explored presidents' homes, nature preserves, and diamond mines, and engaged in discussions about cultural identity while taking classes at the University of Botswana.

"Traveling internationally has opened my eyes to the history of so many places and people that I had no clue about. It has made me more aware of the historic relationships between these countries and the United States."

While in Amsterdam, Robinson participated in a two-week cultural immersion program that included a canal tour of the city, as well as a tour of The Hague, the seat of the government of The Netherlands. Such an opportunity is quite valuable for a student who plans a career as an attorney.

"My experiences abroad—particularly my interactions with others—will help me become better at communicating with my colleagues and thinking from a global perspective when dealing with whatever is handed to me," said Robinson.

Generous gifts allow the College to meet its goal of providing every student with a global experience. In the FY2011 academic year, fewer than 100 Spelman students participated in study abroad programs. In FY2015, that number rose to 324. Students also travel to international locations for service-oriented alternative spring break, cultural excursions and research. These critical international experiences prepare scholars on their journey toward making a lasting impact in the world.

Mellon Foundation Grant Supports New Curatorial Studies Program

In February 2015, Spelman launched the pilot of the Curatorial Studies Program with a $250,000 grant from The Andrew W. Mellon Foundation. This innovative two-year collaboration between the Spelman College Museum of Fine Art and the Department of Art and Art History will prepare the next generation of students of African descent for curatorial professions. Most importantly, this program will serve as a pipeline to diversify a field that has been described as more than 80 percent white, according to the American Alliance of Museums.

"Museums nationwide are rethinking how they can become even more relevant, better reflect their changing audiences and diversify the curatorial field," said Andrea Barnwell Brownlee, Ph.D., director of the Museum and visionary behind the initiative. "This program is a significant part of the larger conversation."

Ten Spelman juniors and seniors in various academic majors are completing two courses of curatorial studies and participated in summer internships with museums across the country. The participants also have opportunities for mentoring by seasoned curators and museum professionals, take spring break courses at partner institutions and present a culminating project. Mora Beauchamp-Byrd, Ph.D., a new visiting assistant professor of art history and curatorial studies, teaches the program's curatorial studies courses, as well as additional classes in the Department of Art and Art History.

"The Spelman College Department of Art and Art History has a long history of producing important curators and arts administrators," said Arturo Lindsay, D.A., professor emeritus of art and art history. "The Mellon Foundation grant will help fulfill the College's desire to have a formal curatorial studies concentration to better prepare students to not only fill the diversity gap in America's museums, but build bright legacies along the way."

Ways to Give

Whether you choose to give to the Annual Fund, make a leadership gift of $25,000 or more, provide a gift or grant through your business or foundation, or plan to make a future gift, Spelman College appreciates your commitment to the education of our extraordinary students.

Outright gifts yield immediate tax benefits and have an instant impact on Spelman.

Various annuities provide you with income now and preserve the principal for later use for Spelman.

Bequest intentions are a living testament to your desire to invest in generations of young women who sustain our tradition of achievement. By means of your will or other estate plan, you can name Spelman as the beneficiary of a portion of your estate, or of particular assets in your estate.

Cash gifts and pledges: The easiest and most popular form of giving, these contributions can be made online; by electronic funds transfer (EFT); recurring credit card deductions (RCC); phone; or mail. For as little as $10 a month, the RCC option allows you to set up regular, automatic payments charged to the card that you select, and your EFT gifts to Spelman will be automatically deducted from your checking or savings account.

Gifts of appreciated securities: Sometimes more valuable than outright gifts, these contributions give you an immediate tax deduction and do not incur capital gains. The sale of these transferred securities enables Spelman to support critical initiatives.

Gifts of real property: When you deed your home/vacation home, undeveloped property, or commercial building to Spelman, you receive an immediate tax deduction and do not incur capital gains. Spelman may either use your property for the College or sell it and apply the proceeds to achieve its strategic goals.

Matching gifts: Matching gifts can be used to double your gift to Spelman College. If you are employed with a matching gift company, please contact your company's human resources department for instructions.
