A vintage black and white photograph of six young women in late 19th-century attire. Three women stand in the back row, and three are seated or kneeling in the front. They are posed in front of a dense, leafy vine-covered trellis. The women are wearing high-collared dresses with long sleeves and full skirts. The photograph is mounted on a dark album page.

When The Misses Packard And Giles Arrived

Oh! It Was a Wonder!" recalled the late Mrs. Annie Alexander, an early alumna of Spelman, in a taped statement of love and appreciation played as a part of Spelman's Centennial observance. "It was something," continued Mrs. Alexander, "that the Negro women will remember as long as there's one living. They'll always remember the sacrifice and the dedication and the love for our dear Jesus that helped them (Misses Packard and Giles) to establish Spelman Seminary and oh if they could see it now and see what they have done — if they could only see it now they would be so glad."

Mrs. Alexander, over her life of 105 years was able to see this wonder. She saw Spelman then and she saw Spelman now. And what she saw now that she didn't see then was cause for unrestrained joy and happiness.

The wonder is what has happened to Spelman during these first one hundred years of her existence.

When the Misses Packard and Giles arrived in Atlanta that cold and windy night in April, 1881 (actually it was April Fool's Day), they had certain financial commitments made by New England Baptists to assist them in their efforts to set up a school for Negro women. But they had little in the way of physical facilities and equipment to work with. Help came to them, however, in the person of the Reverend Frank Quarles, affectionately known by all as Father Quarles who volunteered the facilities of his church, the present Freindship Baptist Church, as a place to hold classes. So, on April 11, 1881, in the basement of Friendship Baptist Church, Spelman College, known then as the Atlanta Baptist Female Seminary, was begun. "It Was A Wonder."

On April 11, 1881, the Atlanta Baptist Female Seminary (which in this brief account will hereafter be referred to as Spelman College) opened with a grand total of eleven students. News of the opening of the school certainly must have spread quickly, for three months later, there were eighty students enrolled. By 1882, over 200 were enrolled and attendance had to be restricted to young women over fifteen years of age. By contrast, the enrollment for the 1980-81 term was 1,367!

Colleges and Schools As A Liberal Arts Institution

By the end of 1882! Misses Giles and Packard, satisfied that their young school was growing into a successful venture, began thinking of a more permanent location. In 1883, then, the school was moved to a group of army barracks situated on the present site of the campus. From such humble beginnings, no location of its own in 1881, to several army barracks in 1883, to a modern campus of 32 acres and 22 buildings in 1982, with another dormitory about to get underway, Spelman has show marvelous growth.

The growth of the young developing institution showed itself in other areas. This growth reveals not so much a shifting of emphasis as much as a broadening of purpose and sphere of operations. Misses Giles and Packard had as their main purpose the training of young Black women to be teachers, missionaries and church workers. Incidentally, attending chapel exercises was an important part of the training to become teachers, missionaries and church workers. Students of the 1980's upper classwomen particularly, can appreciate how different their situation vis-a-vis attending chapel (now we call it "convocation") is when they learn that until not too many years ago, students were required to attend chapel every day not at 11:00 but at 8:00 in the morning. As far as proper attire was concerned, wearing slacks was not allowed on campus, except on Saturdays (in the early days, though, slacks were not allowed at all). Spelman's purpose today is to "give students a comprehensive liberal arts background through study in the fine arts, humanities, social sciences, and natural sciences.

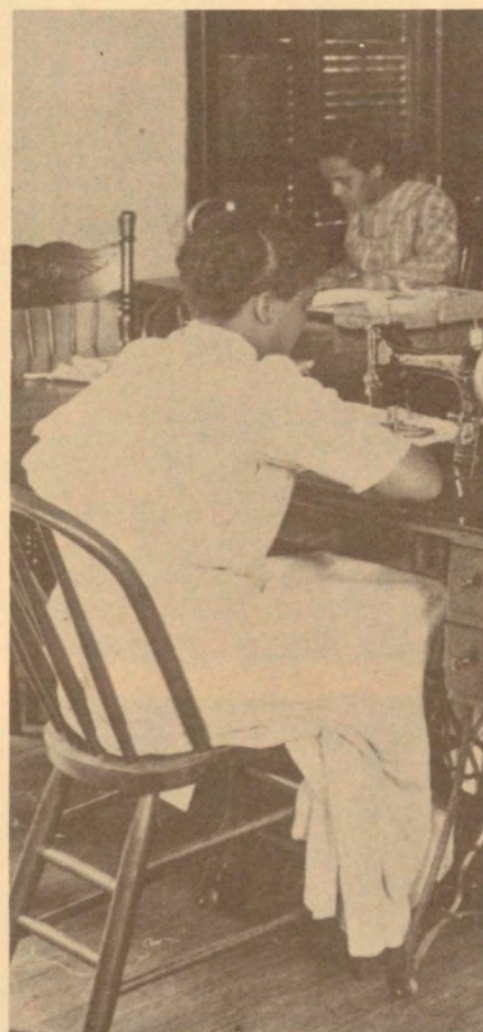

To that end majors are offered in at least 23 subjects, and students are encouraged to prepare themselves for further study or for entering the work force in areas which, until recently, were not generally open to young Black women. But this broadening of purpose did not happen all at once. When Spelman moved to the barracks location, opportunity for extending the curriculum became evident. Great emphasis was put on preparing teachers, through the introduction of a normal course. A college preparatory course was introduced, and an industrial department, which taught cooking, sewing, house-keeping, laundering, and printing "assumed a high priority in the curriculum because of a desire to make education practical." In the decades of the 1920's and 30's, through the lopping off of the industrial department, the discontinuance of the high school, the changing of the name and the emphasizing of the liberal arts curriculum to Spelman College the institution became accredited by the Southern Association of

Students Entering Spelman College In The Fall Of 1982 Are Impressed.

'Students entering Spelman College,' in the fall of 1982 are impressed by the curriculum resources and the pleasant study surroundings offered by the spacious and beautiful Robert W. Woodruff Library. They have no acquaintance with Quarles Library, the learning resource center which, for many years, was located on the first floor of Giles Hall. This facility, the space which it occupied now taken by the Women's Resource and Study Center, calls up fond memories and pleasant associations in hearts and minds of students who attended Spelman during its existence. Both Quarles Library and the Woodruff Library are a far cry from the "Bible, pad, and pencil" which were the only resources which Misses Giles and Packard had on that April day when they taught their first classes.

"Oh! It Was A Wonder." Spelman College which began with no facilities or properties of its own has developed into an institution the physical assets of which are worth an increasingly large sum in the present financial market. It has become known both nationally and internationally. In 1900, 82 percent of its students were from Georgia; in 1982, Georgia students consistute only thirty-two percent of the total enrollment. A goodly number of students come from other countries, particularly from countries in Africa.

"Oh! It Was A Wonder."

Spelman Has Achieved Prominence In The Arts.

Spelman Seminary, Atlanta, Ga.

Music Class

Spelman has achieved prominence in the arts. With the organizing of the Atlanta-Morehouse-Spelman players and the Atlanta-Morehouse-Spelman Chorus, Spelman College institutionalized a tradition of excellence in the arts which had been in existence for some time. For it was in 1882, that the first joint concert involving Spelman College (then known as Atlanta Baptist Seminary) was held. The Drama department tour of Europe with their production of Jamaica and the annual tours of the Glee Club are tangible events highlighting Spelman's prominence in these areas.

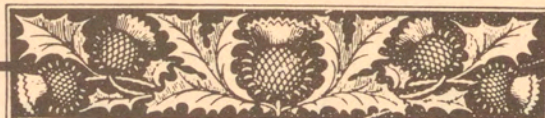

"Oh! It Was A Wonder." Centennial Day, April 11, 1981, was a glorious day! The more 500 alumae who have passed through the classrooms of Spelman are a wondrous testimony to the vision of her founder to the dedicated service of her many teachers over the years; to the faith and generosity of her benefactors, and to the ever present support of her students and alumnae.

Mrs. Annie Alexander was so right! "It Was A Wonder! . . . if they could only see it now! . . ."

(1886) 1886.

It is a WONDER! The Yearbook staff hopes that our Spelman will always be a WONDER. Let us all dedicate ourselves — alumnae; student faculty; administration — to keeping Spelman the institution that it is: an institution, all segments of which are continually in pursuit of excellence. In the words of President Stewart:

Above all, we must be good at what we do and, in fact, do what we say we do which is to produce outstanding young women who can compete and who will achieve in the larger society. This we have tried to do for one hundred years. This we will continue to do.

The Yearbook Staff acknowledges with sincere thanks and appreciation the kind permission of Beverly Sheftall and Jo Moore Stewart to use their Spelman: A Centennial Celebration as a valued source of information concerning Spelman's early history.

Parade: Spelman Style

On November 7 we all rose especially early for the much anticipated annual Morehouse Homecoming Parade. It was full of colorful floats, homecoming queens, bands and dignitaries. The game was the highlight of the day but the parade was an essential part of that day, which ended with the Homecoming Ball.

Le Promenade

It was like Premiere Night at Caesar's Palace. Lights flashed as they bounced off the gleaming clear windows of the limousines; Rolls Royce and Mercedes, and diamonds glistened in the mystique of the moonlight. They promenaded down the white carpeted walkway swaying in rhythm to the pulsating inflections of the announcers voice. They wore sequene gowns and black tuxedos. Crowds greeted them with smiles and thunderous applause and then they greeted the Queen. It was a night they would never forget because tonight they were in the spotlight. They had every right to be there because they too were king and queens.

Coronation

We all participated in making the Morehouse Homecoming Coronation a success.

With much time and a great deal of collective energy we were able to present an outstanding coronation. Under the direction of Lamar Alford our hard work became a reality in the 1981 Morehouse Coronation.

A Night Of Charisma

THE GRAND FINALE

From the homecoming coronation to the maroon and white ball, all shows were as one: A Command Performance for the People. This was the theme of the Spelman-Morehouse homecoming weekend. Practice for the much awaited coronation began two months ahead of time. During that two month period, one could see all of the courts practicing their routine dances just to make that one night, November 6, 1981, an unforgettable one.

The homecoming parade took place the next morning. Clubs and other service organizations worked long hard hours the night before to finish decorating floats and cars for the parade; but the final outcome was worth all of the sleepless hours. The football game started hours later when we took on undefeated West Georgia.

To cap the day off and thus the homecoming weekend, many students from the entire AUC attended the Maroon and White Ball to enjoy a night of dancing.

"THE CHERRY ORCHARD"

The Cherry Orchard is a play written by a Russian playwright, Anton Checkov, in the late 1800's. The play is about a very rich family who ultimately loses all they have gained and their inability to cope with such a drastic change in status.

The cutting down of the Cherry Orchard symbolizes the demise of the old and the coming of the new.

For Colored Girls Who Have Considered Suicide When The Rainbow Is Enuf.

For Colored Girls is a choreo-poem by Ntozake Shange. It is a collection of poems, songs and dances addressing the plights and experiences of Black women. There are six characters, each dressed in different colors (red, blue, yellow, green, orange, pink) which reflects the tone of their speeches. For instance, the Lady in Yellow's selections were basically light which the Lady in Blue's were primarily melancholy. The speeches touched on subjects as varied as a young girl's delight in the excitement of her prom night to the devastation of a woman who has lost her children.

Seniors Take The Gateway To The Future

1982
Reflections

Spelman
College
Atlanta, Georgia
Gateways To A
Second Century

Spelmanites, striving, ambitious, determined and dedicated — these words describe the SPELMAN WOMAN. Her style, beauty, and charm overwhelm anyone she comes in contact with. Far and near she comes from many different walks of life, biculturally competent, and with an insatiable desire to learn.

Because Spelman is noted for excelling in academics, recruitment from Africa, France, Canada, and the Bahamas, to name a few countries have been possible.

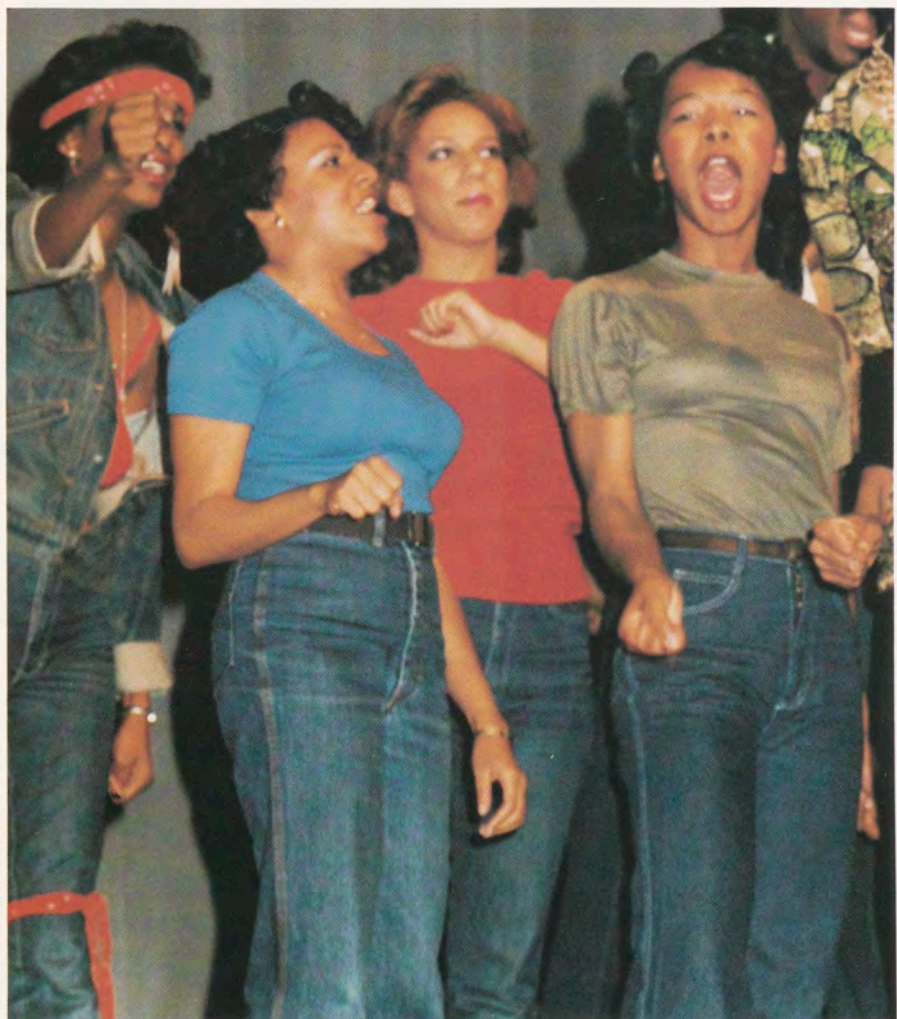

Aside from the parties, fun and games a Spelmanite encounters here, her sole purpose is to strive for academic excellence, which she usually attains during her stay at Spelman.

People make the world go 'round. As college students we come in contact with many people. The individual roles that these people play in our lives many times adds to our growth. Our friends in the dorms, our instructors, the administration and all those we interact with are important people to us. By being surrounded by people at Spelman, in Atlanta and in the world we are learning so much about ourselves and about working and living harmoniously with others.

Each person we come in contact with effects our lives in some way or another. Meeting people, talking with people, getting to know people is all part of getting to know ourselves.

Enthusiasm! In her smile, in her studies, in her actions and about herself, the Spelman woman is enthusiastic. From the day she set foot on Spelman's campus she has been energetic in pursuit of her goals. She takes advantage of every opportunity to explore. The Spelman woman is enthusiastic not only about her studies, but her aspirations and helping others as well. She is positive about learning from her mistakes and enthusiastic in growing from them.

There are many things that we are exposed to on Spelman's campus that serve to increase our enthusiasm. They are world-wide speakers, fine arts presentations, films on campus, literature and a staff of dynamic, energetic instructors.

Most of all as we approach our second century of educating achievers, we are enthusiastic about being black women in an ever-changing society.

Leadership. Spelman women take on many roles in their day-to-day campus lives but the role of the leader is a major role in all her activities. Upon entering college the Spelman woman develops an ingredient of personality which causes other women to follow her. In her dealings with others she is a person who by example, talents and qualities of leadership plays a directing role. The Spelman woman has the capacity to guide by indicating the way and wields

Men are a special part of our lives. Handsome, cute, funny, short, tall, Northern, and Southern men are all considered beautiful men here at Spelman. No matter what we have to do we always have time to relax with the men who are so much a part of lives on campus. Men add that very special something to our college environment. We laugh together, we study together, and we party together but most of all we grow together. The men we come in contact with have high goals and aspirations, as well as dreams for their futures just as we do. Our friendships with men and their friendships with us have served to enhance our college lives.

Atlanta located in the heart of Georgia is the black cultural, educational, social and financial center of the South.

The Atlanta University Center is only one of the many outstanding features Atlanta has to offer as the only black college consortium in the world. The colleges that make up the AU Center are Clark, Morehouse, Morris Brown, ITC, Atlanta University and Spelman, which has in attendance students from all over the world.

The Omni, Fox Theatre, Civic Center and Memorial Arts Center offer the finest in theatre, dance, art and music.

Mr. V's, VIP's, Cisco's and others are just a few of the places we frequent for social outlets.

New worlds are what we are seeking. Although our individual career desires and expectations differ, as black women preparing to embark on new worlds we have asked ourselves some tough questions about our futures. If nothing else we are beginning to realize how complex decisions for our futures really are.

We will bring into our new world various backgrounds. Spelman College has been fundamental in providing us with a diverse educational, social and cultural environment. Primary among the things we will be bringing into our new worlds are a willingness to learn and a potential for development.

Dedication...

The women of Spelman College in preparing "Gateways to a Second Century" at this time would like to dedicate the 1982 Reflections to Dr. Roland Allison in recognition of his tireless and unending dedication to Spelman College.

For over 16 years Dr. Allison has been instrumental in our growth and development at Spelman College. He is especially noted for being the director of the Spelman College Glee Club, who are known throughout the world by those who love and appreciate music. He has instilled in us a sense of pride and loyalty to ourselves and Spelman College.

This is our opportunity to thank Dr. Allison for his years of caring and sharing. Always ready with a kind word and warm smile to make it all seem worthwhile. Dr. Allison has given us all stern persuasion and spent countless hours helping to shape us into better Spelman women and hence, better black women. Therefore, we, the 1982 Reflections Staff on behalf of the entire Spelman sisterhood salute Dr. Ronald Allison.
